Storms Wreck Southern Homes

Child Opens Door Of Car, Is Killed

Wappingers Falls Girl Strikes Pavement in Saugerties Area

Maria Scarcelli, two years and eight months old, was fatally injured when she accidentally opened the rear door of a moving automobile and fell to the highway near Saugerties about 6 p. m. Saturday, state police reported.

The child, daughter of Mrs. Rita Scarcelli of 27 Market street, Wappingers Falls, was pronounced dead by Dr. Lester Sonking of Saugerties on her arrival at the Dale Sanitarium in that village.

Coroner Michael A. Galietta has issued a verdict of accidental death.

Troopers said Maria was riding with her mother in the rear seat of a 1940 sedan driven by Vincent Joseph Zeidler of 84 West Pierpont street, Kingston.

State Police Report

As the automobile was traveling south on Route 32, about 30 miles an hour, the child apparently grabbed the left rear door handle, and the door opened, state police reported after investigation by Sgt. Arthur A. Reilly and Trooper R. F. Dauch. The child fell to the pavement, suffering a broken neck, according to the report.

The accident occurred about one mile south of Saugerties.

Other passengers in the vehicle were Adeline and Fannie Policastro, who were riding in the front seat, and Joseph Policastro, who was in the back seat, troopers said.

The girl was the daughter of Louis and Rita Scarcelli of Wappingers Falls, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Policastro of Glasco. The funeral will be held from the home of the grandparents on Tuesday at 11 a. m. with the blessing at St. Joseph's Church, Glasco. The body was removed to M. A. Galietta Funeral Home.

Terrifying Experience

New York, April 20 (AP)—Just as a man started to plunge from the Triborough Bridge today, a policeman grabbed his wrists and held him dangling above the water for eight terrifying minutes. He finally was pulled back onto the bridge. Police Sergeant James Folan found the man, Dulce Pages, 25, hanging by his hands from the railing. At the instant Pages let go, Folan grasped his wrists. But he couldn't lift Pages back over the railing. For eight tense, exhausting minutes, Folan kept his grip on the suspended man until other police arrived to help drag him to safety. Pages, of the Bronx, told police he had wanted to die because he had lost all he owned in gambling. He was taken to a hospital for observation.

Treated for Injuries

James Tallman, 7, of Gardiner was treated for minor injuries received when he was struck by an automobile in Gardiner about 11 a. m. Sunday, state police reported. According to the report, the boy ran from behind two parked cars and into the path of an automobile driven by E. T. McIntosh, 40, of Gardiner.

Big Cotton Mill, Houses and Schools Are Hit Hard — 8 Are Crash Victims

Atlanta, April 20 (AP)—Pint-sized tornadoes and a strange, hurricane-like wind battered three southern states over the weekend, killing 10 persons and injuring more than 400.

Property damage climbed into the millions of dollars.

Countless homes were wrecked. Hundreds were left jobless when the winds devastated an Alabama cotton mill. Three grammar schools in Columbus, Ga., were so heavily damaged that 2,000 children were being reassigned to other classrooms on a double-session basis.

In a tragic sidelight, eight persons were killed in an automobile collision near Jackson, Ga. Four of the victims were en route to inspect the damage to the family home hit by stiff winds at Montezuma.

Both surveys still in progress, 625 homes in Arkansas, Alabama and Georgia were reported demolished. Approximately 3,500 others were damaged, at least half of them extensively.

Loss in Alabama High

Gov. Gordon Persons of Alabama estimated the economic loss in his state at between 4 and 5 million dollars. Damage in Arkansas was fixed at about 1½ million. Georgia damage, confined principally to the Columbus area, was estimated at several millions.

The storms, packing gusts of up to more than 100 miles an hour, first struck in northeast Arkansas Saturday night, dipped into central and east Alabama, then slammed into west Georgia.

Lee county and Siluria, Ala., and Columbus were the areas hardest hit, although many small communities suffered heavy damage.

To a large part of the nation today it was spring in name only. Freezing temperatures were common in the northern midwest—21 at North Platte, Neb., 22 at Mismarck, N. D., 30 at Bradford, Ill.

90 in Miami

Except in some parts of the south, where Miami's 90 set a new record high for April 19, temperatures east of the Rocky Mountains were below seasonal average, and in northern Illinois, around the Great Lakes, in Pennsylvania, Ohio and New England there were snow flurries or light rain.

In and near the Dixie storm area temperatures were still chilly this morning—for example, Atlanta 40, New Orleans 47.

West of the Rockies, it was warmer than normal for this season but continuing light rains in central and southern California cooled off those areas.

Plan Goes to Congress

Washington, April 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower today sent Congress a reorganization plan for the Justice Department. It would make the deputy attorney general second in command at the department instead of the solicitor general. Additionally, the plan provides for an acting attorney general when the attorney general and deputy attorney general are absent. It would authorize the attorney general to set down the order in which assistant attorneys general and the solicitor general would take charge of the department in these circumstances.

Bard Student Is Killed, 2 Other Persons Injured

Robert E. Weigt, Senior, Is Victim; Companions Are Taken to Hospital

A young airman on leave to Bard College to complete his education was instantly killed and his two companions were injured in an automobile accident near the college campus late Saturday night.

Robert E. Weigt, 23, of 9 Grace Court North, Great Neck, L. I., attached to Sandia Air Base, Albuquerque, N. Mex., died of a compound skull fracture and numerous other injuries, Rhinebeck troopers and Dr. L. E. Cotter, Dutchess county medical examiner, reported.

Two Are Injured

Injured were the driver, Bjarne R. Netland, 20, of Woodbine road, Stamford, Conn., a student at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn; and Jordan L. King, 22, of 2 College View avenue, Poughkeepsie, a student at New York University. Both were taken to Northern Dutchess Health Center, Rhinebeck. Troopers said King suffered fractures of the upper and lower right leg and a possible fracture of the left side of the pelvis. Netland reportedly suffered lacerations of the left side of the face.

State police said the station wagon in which the students were riding was traveling north on the Annandale road, ran off the west side near the Bard College entrance, plunged down a small embankment and struck a tree.

Allies Glad To Be Out of Red Prisons

All Treated Fairly Well, They Say; Were Given Indoctrination Doses by Communists

Freedom Village, Korea, April 20 (AP)—Americans and fellow United Nations soldiers freed today from Communist prison stockades said the Reds treated them fairly well—particularly after the truce negotiations began—but did try to convert them to communism.

All agreed it was wonderful to be free.

Lt. Roy M. Jones, Minneapolis, Minn., said Communist treatment was "unbelievably poor" before the truce talks began, but the quality improved somewhat and varied with the ups and downs of the negotiations.

Greek soldier Chletzos Constantinos of Lemnos Island said the Reds didn't try to indoctrinate him because "I didn't know their language and they didn't know mine."

Pfc. Raymond H. Medina of the Bronx, N. Y., summed up the thoughts of most returning prisoners when he said simply:

"I'll be glad to be home."

Some Believed It

Cpl. James Lee Pinkston, Salisbury, N. C., said the Reds told the prisoners allied troops had waged germ warfare in Korea and "some believed it."

Pinkston said the Reds showed "no partiality" to prisoners who seemed favorable toward propaganda.

Many of the 30 Americans and other U. N. troops willingly faced a battery of newsmen, photographers and television cameras on their arrival in this tent city, first stop on the road home.

Jones, a first cavalry division veteran who was captured in the winter of 1950, said "the treatment prior to the peace negotiations, started in 1951 was unbelievably poor. When the peace negotiations started, treatment got better.

"I refer in particular to food, housing, clothing and the conditions under which men were forced to travel and march.

"It certainly feels wonderful to be a free man again."

Treatment Varied

He said that the Communist treatment also varied with the progress shown by the armistice negotiations.

He is listed as a pleurisy patient.

He said prior to the armistice negotiations the "Chinese had a political indoctrination course that was required attendance up to the beginning of 1952."

Then the Reds suddenly dropped it.

Some Appear Stunned at First as Release Stories Reach America From Korea

(By The Associated Press)

A little Spanish-speaking mother in New York who had prayed for hours at her church said softly:

"My prayers have been answered and so soon."

She was happy and thankful that her son had been freed from the Communist prison camps and was coming home from Korea.

A youthful wife in Hereford, Texas, almost shouted her joy:

"Oh boy, oh boy, am I happy."

Her husband was one of the 30 prisoners freed yesterday by the Reds, too. She was especially happy because her husband would get to see his 2-year-old daughter for the first time.

In all the homes of the luck 30 Americans who were freed there was happy thanksgiving. Some were the humblest; others in the fashionable suburbs. From all came a common response:

Soon we will see our loved ones.

But for many there was bitter disappointment and more anguished waiting. Thousands of relatives and friends of the more than 1,200 prisoners of war in Red camps had watched television programs and listened to the radio. Their hopes were dashed for the time being, at least.

90 More in 10 Days

Some 90 more Americans are to be returned by the Communists in the historic exchange at Freedom Village in Korea within the next 10 days.

From all over the nation came stories of aging, greying mothers, who took new hope when they heard their sons had been released and would come home. For them the months and years of waiting had been long and trying.

Probably the most dramatic of all was Mrs. Inocencio Medina, 52-year-old Puerto Rican born woman who lives in New York's Bronx. She went not to her radio to listen but to her church to pray that her boy might be sent home. After hours in prayer she returned late last night to find her prayers answered and a joyful, shouting celebration in her home. The son Pfc. Raymond Medina, 26, enlisted in Puerto Rico, although he is American born. He was reported a prisoner 28 months ago.

The happy wife in Hereford, Texas, was Mrs. Shirley Neighbors, 20, whose husband, Sgt. Gerald Neighbors, 22, was captured in December, 1950. The daughter he has never seen is Cynthia Kay, 2.

Governor Approves No-Fix on Tickets

Albany, April 20 (AP)—Gov. Dewey today approved legislation designed to set up an iron-clad system throughout the state to prevent "fixing" of traffic tickets.

The measure was part of the governor's legislative program to combat what he terms "murder on the highways."

Dewey said in a memorandum that the fixing of traffic tickets "ranks high in the list of practices which undermine public respect for our laws, destroy police morale and breed lawlessness."

Each municipality would be required to file with the state a number duplicate of every ticket issued to motorists for traffic violations. The disposition of each case would have to be noted on the ticket.

Front Is Quiet As Swap Goes On

Chinese Throw Only Three Light Probing Attacks; Planes Grounded

Seoul, April 20 (AP)—Fighting along the 155-mile Korean battle front sputtered briefly then all but died out today as the warring armies swapped disabled prisoners at Panmunjom.

Aside from a few partol contacts the Reds threw only three light probing attacks against allied forward positions, the Eighth Army said.

Murky weather grounded most UN warplanes today following Sunday's mammoth assault against Communist frontline positions. The Fifth Air Force called it the biggest close-support effort in six months.

More than 225 jet and propeller-driven fighter-bombers dropped fire and explosives on the Red lines from dawn to dusk, concentrating on the western front.

Air Alert in Seoul

There was a brief air alert in the Seoul area Sunday night when three to five Red planes circled the big west coast port of Inchon and Kimpo airfield. No bombs were dropped.

A strange object described as delta-shaped and about seven feet in diameter was spotted by U. S. airmen flying slowly over Red lines in western Korea. There was no official comment.

The navy announced that a shell from a Red shore battery hit the main deck of the destroyer USS Kyes Sunday, causing only superficial damage. The warship had steamed close inshore to fire at Red gun positions south of the Communist east coast port city of Wonsan.

The battleship New Jersey opened up on Wonsan with her nine 16-inch guns Monday in the navy's unending air and water siege of that transportation hub.

Contrast Is Sharp

The quiet ground front Monday contrasted sharply with the bloody Chinese attacks on UN lines in the past week. Sunday morning, U. S. and Belgian troops of the Third Infantry Division kicked back a battalion-sized Chinese assault northwest of Kumhwa in western Korea.

Monday morning, drizzling rain, thick haze and low clouds covered most of North Korea. The Fifth Air Force said small groups of American Sabre jets swept northward into MIG Alley, but failed to sight any Russian MIG jets.

Good weather Sunday gave the

Public Service Is Opposed to Any Gas Rate Increase

New York, April 20 (AP) — The State Public Service Commission has registered opposition with the Federal Power Commission to any rate increase for the Hope Natural Gas Company.

The state commission, which announced its protest last night, said the increase could affect consumers in New York state.

The Hope firm, through affiliates and other companies, supplies several gas utilities which serve about one million customers in upstate New York, the announcement said.

The Hope Company has asked the power commission for a rate increase which went into effect last Feb. 15—at least temporarily—pending final decision by the commission.

The state commission said an increase would mean a boost of nine to 10 per cent in the wholesale price paid by these New York companies: Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation, which serves the Albany capital district, Syracuse, Utica and many small central New York communities; Rockland Light and Power Company; Binghamton Gas Works; and the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation, which serves portions of the Hudson Valley, including Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Newburgh and Beacon.

Feeling Is Reds Gave Their Best

Prisoners Are Rushed by Helicopter to UN Freedom Village, Then to Seoul Hospital

Panmunjom, Korea, April 20 (AP)—One hundred disabled allied war prisoners, some weeping silently, came down Freedom Road today in an historic exchange for 500 glum Communist sick and wounded of the Korean war.

The trade, first clear break in long-deadlocked truce talks, could be the prelude to an armistice in the 34-month-old war. The talks, suspended last October, resume Saturday.

The blue-clad allied prisoners included 30 Americans, 12 British, 50 South Koreans, four Turks and one each from Canada, South Africa, Greece and the Philippines.

Another 100 return tomorrow—35 Americans, 12 British, three Turks and 50 South Koreans, the Reds said today. In all, 605 allied sick and wounded are being traded for 5,800 Reds.

Those crossing today appeared to be in fair health and well-fed. None mentioned unusually harsh treatment in the North Korean prison camps, where some had been since 1950, the first year of the war. But one officer said treatment was "unbelievably poor" before the truce negotiations began, then picked up materially.

Four came back on stretchers; others walked or hobbled on crutches.

Solemn Dramatic Scene

It was a solemn, dramatic scene as the sun burst through clouded skies in mid-morning.

The return prisoners grinned or wept or remained stolid, each man to his own feelings.

Sounds of battle from a nearby fight echoed over this ancient village.

Many said the Reds tried to win them to communism, but there was no outward indication of success.

One prisoner said "they showed us photos" on germ warfare, Red charges which have been vigorously denied by the United Nations command and Washington.

"Some believed it," added another.

Cpl. Kenyon Wagner of Detroit, Mich., a tuberculosis patient, said allied soldiers were "exposed to Communist literature and study was encouraged."

Asked if any had turned Communist, Wagner replied: "I could not say."

Wagner said he was given "the whole works" in medical treatment, including modern drugs. He said one of his Red doctors, was trained in Detroit.

Treatment Not Too Bad

Pfc. Almond L. Nolan of Rexville, N. Y., a captive since December, 1950, said:

"Treatment up there wasn't too bad * * * I believe we got the best they could do although the first winter was pretty rough."

"We were told there would be a glorious day for some of us," he added. "When the man came to my name all I could say is I heard the man say it but I didn't believe it."

Some prisoners said they had seen Russians in North Korea, but others said they had seen one.

"We saw plenty of girls," said another.

From Panmunjom, the prisoners were rushed by helicopter and ambulance to Munsan's "Freedom Village" for medical care and interviews. Then on to a hospital at Seoul.

Some were expected to leave Tuesday for Japan on the next leg of a trip back to the United States.

Monday's exchange started just before 9 a. m. and the 100 allied soldiers were across the line by 11 a. m.

The allied men came down from their North Korean prison camps

Stream Erosion Undermines Garage

The above photograph of the rear of Alexander M. Serota's property along the Little Beaverkill at Mount Tremper shows the effects of undermining. The garage shown has been moved forward from its concrete slab, which hangs at least six feet over the bank and has been temporarily blocked up by the contractor. The ruins of a heavy concrete block retaining wall and fence can be seen reaching into the creek waters. (Freeman Photo).

Change in Stream Is Cause Of Erosion at Mt. Tremper

Backyards of several properties along the Little Beaverkill creek at Mount Tremper are gradually disappearing from erosion which began when the stream changed its course in the flood of November, 1950.

Letters have been received by Alexander Serota of Mount Tremper from George S. Fichtner, town of Shandaken supervisor; Congressman J. Ernest Wharton; Senator Arthur H. Wicks; Horace S. Evans, executive director of the New York State Flood Control Commission, and authorities of the Army Corps of Engineers.

All officials express concern over the situation and are exploring the possibilities of action. On April 2 the Army Corps of Engineers sent men to investigate the problem, but a report indicated that the Army is not authorized to do work on private property and a flood control project on the small creek with its relatively few properties would be "economically not justified." Efforts are being continued to work out a solution, and it was indicated that Evans advised Army authorities he would take the matter up with the proper state officials.

Serota has engaged John T. Frederick, Kingston contractor,

A youthful wife in Hereford, Texas, almost shouted her joy:

"Oh boy, oh boy, am I happy."

Her husband was one of the 30 prisoners freed yesterday by the Reds, too. She was especially happy because her husband would get to see his 2-year-old daughter for the first time.

In all the homes of the luck 30 Americans who were freed there was happy thanksgiving. Some were the humblest; others in the fashionable suburbs. From all came a common response:

Soon we will see our loved ones.

But for many there was bitter disappointment and more anguished waiting. Thousands of relatives and friends of the more than 1,200 prisoners of war in Red camps had watched television programs and listened to the radio. Their hopes were dashed for the time being, at least.

90 More in 10 Days

Some 90 more Americans are to be returned by the Communists in the historic exchange at Freedom Village in Korea within the next 10 days.

From all over the nation came stories of aging, greying mothers who took new hope when they heard their sons had been released and would come home. For them the months and years of waiting had been long and trying.

Probably the most dramatic of all was Mrs. Inocencio Medina, 52-year-old Puerto Rican born woman who lives in New York's Bronx. She went not to her radio to listen but to her church to pray that her boy might be sent home. After hours in prayer she returned late last night to find her prayers answered and a joyful, shouting celebration in her home. The son Pfc. Raymond Medina, 26, enlisted in Puerto Rico, although he is American born. He was reported a prisoner 28 months ago.

The happy wife in Hereford, Texas, was Mrs. Shirley Neighbors, 20, whose husband, Sgt. Gerald Neighbors, 22, was captured in December, 1950. The daughter he has never seen is Cynthia Kay, 2.

Governor Approves No-Fix on Tickets

Albany, April 20 (AP)—Gov. Dewey today approved legislation designed to set up an ironclad system throughout the state to prevent "fixing" of traffic tickets.

The measure was part of the governor's legislative program to combat what he terms "murder on the highways."

Dewey said in a memorandum that the fixing of traffic tickets "ranks high in the list of practices which undermine public respect for our laws, destroy police morale and breed lawlessness."

Each municipality would be required to file with the state a number duplicate of every ticket issued to motorists for traffic violations. The disposition of each case would have to be noted on the ticket.

Front Is Quiet As Swap Goes On

Chinese Throw Only Three Light Probing Attacks; Planes Grounded

Seoul, April 20 (AP)—Fighting along the 155-mile Korean battle front sputtered briefly then all but died out today as the warring armies swapped disabled prisoners at Panmunjom.

Aside from a few partol contacts the Reds threw only three light probing attacks against allied forward positions, the Eighth Army said.

Murky weather grounded most UN warplanes today following Sunday's mammoth assault against Communist frontline positions. The Fifth Air Force called it the biggest close-support effort in six months.

More than 225 jet and propeller-driven fighter-bombers dropped fire and explosives on the Red lines from dawn to dusk, concentrating on the western front.

Air Alert in Seoul

There was a brief air alert in the Seoul area Sunday night when three to five Red planes circled the big west coast port of Inchon and Kimpo airfield. No bombs were dropped.

A strange object described as delta-shaped and about seven feet in diameter was spotted by U. S. airmen flying slowly over Red lines in western Korea. There was no official comment.

The navy announced that a shell from a Red shore battery hit the main deck of the destroyer USS Kyes Sunday, causing only superficial damage. The warship had steamed close inshore to fire at Red gun positions south of the Communist east coast port city of Wonsan.

The battleship New Jersey opened up on Wonsan with her nine 16-inch guns Monday in the navy's unending air and water siege of that transportation hub.

Contrast Is Sharp

The quiet ground front Monday contrasted sharply with the bloody Chinese attacks on UN lines in the past week. Sunday morning, U. S. and Belgian troops of the Third Infantry Division kicked back a battalion-sized Chinese assault northwest of Kumhwa in western Korea.

Monday morning, drizzling rain, thick haze and low clouds covered most of North Korea. The Fifth Air Force said small groups of American Sabre jets swept northward into MIG Alley, but failed to sight any Russian MIG jets.

Good weather Sunday gave the

Public Service Is Opposed to Any Gas Rate Increase

New York, April 20 (AP) — The State Public Service Commission has registered opposition with the Federal Power Commission to any rate increase for the Hope Natural Gas Company.

The state commission, which announced its protest last night, said the increase could affect consumers in New York state.

The Hope firm, through affiliates and other companies, supplies several gas utilities which serve about one million customers in upstate New York, the announcement said.

The Hope Company has asked the power commission for a rate increase which went into effect last Feb. 15—at least temporarily—pending final decision by the commission.

The state commission said an increase would mean a boost of nine to 10 per cent in the wholesale price paid by these New York companies: Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation, which serves the Albany capital district, Syracuse, Utica and many small central New York communities; Rockland Light and Power Company; Binghamton Gas Works; and the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation, which serves portions of the Hudson Valley, including Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Newburgh and Beacon.

Feeling Is Reds Gave Their Best

Prisoners Are Rushed by Helicopter to UN Freedom Village, Then to Seoul Hospital

Panmunjom, Korea, April 20 (AP)—One hundred disabled allied war prisoners, some weeping silently, came down Freedom Road today in an historic exchange for 500 glum Communist sick and wounded of the Korean war.

The trade, first clear break in long-deadlocked truce talks, could be the prelude to an armistice in the 34-month-old war. The talks, suspended last October, resume Saturday.

The blue-clad allied prisoners included 30 Americans, 12 British, 50 South Koreans, four Turks and one each from Canada, South Africa, Greece and the Philippines.

Another 100 return tomorrow—35 Americans, 12 British, three Turks and 50 South Koreans, the Reds said today. In all, 605 allied sick and wounded are being traded for 5,800 Reds.

Those crossing today appeared to be in fair health and well-fed. None mentioned unusually harsh treatment in the North Korean prison camps, where some had been since 1950, the first year of the war. But one officer said treatment was "unbelievably poor" before the truce negotiations began, then picked up materially.

Four came back on stretchers; others walked or hobbled on crutches.

Solemn Dramatic Scene

It was a solemn, dramatic scene as the sun burst through clouded skies in mid-morning.

The return prisoners grinned or wept or remained stolid, each man to his own feelings.

Sounds of battle from a nearby fight echoed over this ancient village.

Many said the Reds tried to win them to communism, but there was no outward indication of success.

One prisoner said "they showed us photos" on germ warfare, Red charges which have been vigorously denied by the United Nations command and Washington.

"Some believed it," added another.

Cpl. Kenyon Wagner of Detroit, Mich., a tuberculosis patient, said allied soldiers were "exposed to Communist literature and study was encouraged."

Asked if any had turned Communist, Wagner replied: "I could not say."

Wagner said he was given "the whole works" in medical treatment, including modern drugs. He said one of his Red doctors, was trained in Detroit.

Treatment Not Too Bad

Pfc. Almond L. Nolan of Rexville, N. Y., a captive since December, 1950, said:

"Treatment up there wasn't too bad * * * I believe we got the best they could do although the first winter was pretty rough."

"We were told there would be a glorious day for some of us," he added. "When the man came to my name all I could say is I heard the man say it but I didn't believe it."

Some prisoners said they had seen Russians in North Korea, but others said they had seen one.

"We saw plenty of girls," said another.

From Panmunjom, the prisoners were rushed by helicopter and ambulance to Munsan's "Freedom Village" for medical care and interviews. Then on to a hospital at Seoul.

Some were expected to leave Tuesday for Japan on the next leg of a trip back to the United States.

Monday's exchange started just before 9 a. m. and the 100 allied soldiers were across the line by 11 a. m.

The allied men came down from their North Korean prison camps

Stream Erosion Undermines Garage

The above photograph of the rear of Alexander M. Serota's property along the Little Beaverkill at Mount Tremper shows the effects of undermining. The garage shown has been moved forward from its concrete slab, which hangs at least six feet over the bank and has been temporarily blocked up by the contractor. The ruins of a heavy concrete block retaining wall and fence can be seen reaching into the creek waters. (Freeman Photo).

Change in Stream Is Cause Of Erosion at Mt. Tremper

Backyards of several properties along the Little Beaverkill creek at Mount Tremper are gradually disappearing from erosion which began when the stream changed its course in the flood of November, 1950.

Letters have been received by Alexander Serota of Mount Tremper from George S. Fichtner, town of Shandaken supervisor; Congressman J. Ernest Wharton; Senator Arthur H. Wicks; Horace S. Evans, executive director of the New York State Flood Control Commission, and authorities of the Army Corps of Engineers.

All officials express concern over the situation and are exploring the possibilities of action. On April 2 the Army Corps of Engineers sent men to investigate the problem, but a report indicated that the Army is not authorized to do work on private property and a flood control project on the small creek with its relatively few properties would be "economically not justified." Efforts are being continued to work out a solution, and it was indicated that Evans advised Army authorities he would take the matter up with the proper state officials.

Serota has engaged John T. Frederick, Kingston contractor,

Army, Red Cross Cooperation Is Shown for Short

The speed with which the military and the Red Cross cooperated in getting Airman Albert R. Short, Jr., from Williams Air Force Base, Arizona, home after his father was seriously injured was revealed today with the family's permission.

Albert Short, Sr., of 39 Van Deusen street was injured Wednesday, April 15, in an automobile collision about 11:15 a. m. on Route 209 five miles south of Kingston. His condition was reported by the hospital this morning as "still serious, but slightly improved."

Emergency Verified

The Home Service director of Ulster County Chapter, American Red Cross, was notified of the accident and asked to arrange an emergency leave for Airman Short the same evening. After verifying the emergency, local Red Cross officials at 9:30 p. m. contacted officials in Arizona and by the time the local office opened Thursday morning, a telegram awaited stating that leave had been granted by the military. Arrangements for emergency leaves are made through the Red Cross but final decision rests with military authorities.

A Red Cross field director arranged for a TWA flight for Airman Short from Arizona, and he arrived in New York at 3 p. m. Thursday. He was at Kingston Hospital by 6 p. m. the same day.

Gardner Booked On Misdemeanor; Hearing Tuesday

Clinton Gardner, 40, who walked out on local police following a city court sentence nearly a year ago, again faced City Judge Raymond J. Mino today.

Gardner was arrested Saturday by Officer James Harbeck on Broadway near Liberty street on a public intoxication charge, and when he was brought to court this morning, Lt. James P. Martin executed a warrant to hold him as an alleged escaped prisoner.

It is charged that Gardner escaped custody while awaiting transportation to the county jail following a sentence of 30 days last May 23.

Gardner, who, police said, has no home, told Judge Mino today that he has a job in Albany, and the judge imposed a suspended sentence of 30 days in jail on the public intoxication charge.

The alleged escape is an indictable misdemeanor and hearing on that is scheduled for tomorrow morning.

Vandals Destroy Part of Foundation

Local police today moved to track down the persons responsible for an act of vandalism which is costly to the Kingston Model Railroad Club in time, labor and money.

Members of the club have been devoting spare time and energy to the building of an addition to the club quarters back of the McGill property, 541 Broadway, and yesterday, the vandals, believed to be youngsters, pushed down the freshly laid concrete-block foundation.

Henry P. Eighmey, the club's secretary-treasurer, who estimated damage at $100, notified police headquarters at 7:37 p. m. He said the damage was done between 4 and 7:30 p. m., when he discovered it.

Sections of the foundation, 28 by 30-foot, five and six tiers high, were knocked down, and some of the blocks were broken. Twice before, Eighmey said, dirt, which had been piled outside the excavation had been pushed back maliciously within the past two weeks.

The new structure is to be an addition on the south end of the present building. Club members worked on the foundation until about 4 p. m. Eighmey said more than half the completed work was destroyed.

Eighmey issued an emergency call, after discovering the damage, and other club members worked last night to get the concrete off the scattered blocks before it set.

Officers James Harbeck and Francis Loeffler were dispatched on the first investigation last night and Detectives Clarence Brophy and Frank Sammons were assigned today to track down the vandals.

Objection Is Heard Against Train Service Discontinuance

Objection to the discontinuance of the present train service on the Catskill Mountain Branch of the New York Central Railroad was voiced this morning at an adjourned hearing before Hearing Commissioner A. H. Williamson of the Public Service Commission. Two shippers who use the express facilities now offered and Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk objected to removal of the trains, the shippers on the grounds that the trucking service being offered would be inadequate and Mayor Newkirk on the grounds that removal of the trains would be a serious detriment to the communities served.

Says Trains Vital

Mayor Newkirk said that operation of the trains was an asset to the Catskill mountain area and the prosperity of the mountain area reflected in the amount of business which the city does. He said train service was of importance to new concerns desiring to locate in this area. One of the first questions asked by a concern desiring to locate in this area was the railroad facilities available. Removal of the service on the Mountain division would seriously affect the possibilities of new concerns locating in the area.

Testimony on the part of objecting citizens came after the railroad had closed its case following the offering of a contract between the railroad and the Lezette trucking firm of Saugerties under which Lezette would operate trucks between Kingston and Oneonta to handle the business now done by rail.

Testifies on Service

Clarence H. LaFond, assistant general passenger agent of this division, located at Albany, testified he had ridden the bus between Kingston and Oneonta and found the service good. He rode the Adirondack line bus which carried 55 passengers, three passengers were standing when the bus left Kingston. Back to Kingston he rode the Pine Hill-Kingston line which runs parallel to the railroad and that bus carried 57 pasengers. He told of the service and how the bus stopped in various communities, and in one, Glenford, it made four stops for passengers.

William R. Main, research engineer for the railroad who made a study of passenger traffic and recommended the abandonment of the service, went into the cost of placing Budd cars on the run. He said the small Budd car could not handle the express, mail and passenger traffic and the cost of operation of a Budd car would be greater than the present equipment. If two Budds were used the cost of the cars would be $165,000 each and the crew would remain the same as now. Operation of one Budd car would cost over 96 cents per mile and because of the grades and curves the car would not be satisfactory in winter. The run now earns about 83 cents per mile and to put a Budd car on would be entering into a deficit investment by the railroad. He stressed one Budd car could not handle the traffic. It costs about $1.40 per mile to operate the present equipment.

Tells of Requirements

William M. Smith, mail and express assistant manager, testified to requirements to handle mail and express.

A contract between the railroad and Lezette was offered under which Lezette agreed to operate two trucks between Kingston and Oneonta at a cost of $90 per day. Additional service would be available when needed.

Could Cancel Contract

John A. Larkin on cross examination inquired into the provisions of the contract which was drawn for a two year period. He pointed out the contract could be canceled by Lezette on 30 days notice and held the contract therefore was only a 30 day contract. He also argued that the contract contained a provision that the schedule could be added to or cut. This was denied by the railroad which held the service must be continued to the stations on the line.

The question of responsibility also came up. Larkin made inquiries as to who would be responsible for loss of shipments. William R. Stevens for the railroad stated the responsibility would remain with the railroad and express company. The contract between the railroad and Lezette contained a provision under which the railroad might recover loss from Lezette but the shipper would have no contract with the trucker and claims would be filed against the railroad and express company as now. Such a statement was finally put on the record following inquiry by Commissioner Williamson.

Service Not Satisfactory

Houston E. Landis, Jr., vice-president of the Rotron Manufacturing Company of Woodstock, called as the first witness after the railroad closed its case, said the truck service offered was not satisfactory since the truck would arrive later in the morning than the present train and the truck would arrive earlier in the afternoon. Landis said his company worked on a high priority schedule and frequently materials came in on the morning shipment which must be sent out again that afternoon. To cut the working day short to meet the truck would not work. He said if the truck was held afternoons until 5 o'clock to receive shipments that would be good.

Joseph F. Marr, president of a Bearsville company making lamps, also objected to the shortening of the time when shipments could be received and picked up. He said if the truck was held until 5 p. m. it would help his concern which has no storage space to hold over goods. It must be shipped the day completed.

Both Rotron and Marr said their shipments by express were in the neighborhood of $10,000 each per year.

An adjournment was taken until 2 p. m.

The secretary declared that wherever possible the federal government should not interfere with a state or with private enterprise in hydroelectric projects.

Heifetz Is in Italy

Rome, April 20 (AP)—Violinist Jascha Heifetz arrived by air from Tel Aviv today with his right hand still bandaged as a result of an attack in Jerusalem. A youth struck Heifetz early Friday with an iron bar, presumably because he had played music by German composer Richard Strauss in Israel. The violinist plans to start a two-month tour of Europe with a concert tomorrow night in Naples. Doctors in Tel Avid advised him to cancel his final concert in Israel, Saturday night.

Goodman Is Better

Boston, April 20 (AP)—Bandleader Benny Goodman, who collapsed twice yesterday, was reported "considerably better" today and plans to move him to a New York hospital were halted temporarily. The 43-year-old "King of Swing" of the 1930's was scheduled to be moved in an ambulance equipped with an oxygen tent. He spent the night in an oxygen tent in his Hotel Ritz-Carlton suite. A doctor said his condition was not serious enough to warrant immediate hospitalization.

Financial and Commercial

New York, April 20 (AP)—The stock market declined today to around the lowest levels of the year.

At the most the decline extended to around a point while scattered plus signs helped to bolster the list. These latter were small.

Most major divisions were lower. However, small gains showed up in railroads, chemicals, rubbers, merchandising shares and in scattered areas.

Lower stocks included Republic Steel, Studebaker, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Radio Corp., American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda Copper, Dome Mines, American Cyanamid, General Electric, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Pacific, Sinclair Oil, United Airlines, 20th Century-Fox, and Johns-Manville.

United Aircraft hugged the upside. The navy disclosed it would step up its orders for jet engines made by United.

Western New York Has Slushy Snow

Albany, April 20 (AP)—A slushy hangover from winter plastered New York over the weekend with snow ranging up to eight inches.

Sardinia in southeast Erie county reported plows were sent into action against an overnight snowfall of six to eight inches.

Up to four inches fell in northern and mountain regions. Snow continued to fall in mid-morning from Malone, near the Canadian border, to Glens Falls.

The Weather Bureau said one to two inches of snow blanketed most of the rest of the state. Only the lower Hudson Valley escaped. It was clear in New York city.

Temperatures hovered around the freezing mark. The lowest readings were reported at Binghamton, 24, and Elmira, 25.

Forecasters predicted cloudy and windy weather for upstate tonight and tomorrow, with scattered snow flurries in the northern and western sections.

The Weather Burea said it would be "slightly warmer" tomorrow, with the possibility of "some sunshine."

Yoshida's Party Wins 42 Per Cent In Japan's House

Tokyo, April 20 (AP)—Pro-American Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida's Liberal party won 42 per cent of the seats in the powerful House of Representatives yesterday but Japan's political picture was as cloudy as ever.

Complete returns showed today that the second national election in seven months gave the Liberals 199 seats in the 466-member House—not enough to form a single party government. It was a loss of five seats.

Yoshida had staked his political future on the balloting, hoping for a majority. However, his foremost rivals lost strength and it was possible Yoshida would pick up enough outside strength to form his fifth cabinet.

The Communists placed one man in the House. They had none last time.

With only three seats in doubt, this was the lineup: Liberals, 199; Progressives, 75; Left Socialists, 72; Right Socialists, 66; Dissident Liberals, 35; Communist, 1; others, 17.

Slightly more than 35,000,000, or 73 per cent, of the electorate turned out.

The newspaper Asahi reported that the lone Communist who won election was Manichi Kawakami, running in a thickly populated industrial district in Osaka. Kawakami was a former member of the House.

Yoshida himself easily won re-election.

No date has been set for the House to meet and pick the prime minister.

Dewey Vetoes Measure

Albany, April 20 (AP)—A bill that would have required deer and bear hunters to wear license tags on their backs has been vetoed by Gov. Dewey because it would have made a violation a crime rather than a simple offense. Dewey noted in killing the measure Saturday that failure to wear the tag would have been a misdemeanor, "even if the hunter was licensed and the tag inadvertently lost while hunting."

Cardinal Is Ill

Vatican City, April 20 (AP)—Valerio Cardinal Valeri, one of 24 Catholic prelates Pope Pius XII elevated to the Sacred College last January, was reported gravely ill at the Vatican with pneumonia today. Cardinal Valeri, 69, a native of Italy, is prefect of the Congregation for Religious Orders.

U. S. Board Hits Communist Party As Soviet Puppet

Washington, April 20 (AP) — A government board today branded the U. S. Communist party as "a subsidiary and puppet of the Soviet Union" and ordered the party to bare its membership lists and give a financial accounting.

The order is subject to review by the courts.

In New York city, a spokesman for the party said the decision had been expected and that counsel had been instructed to take the case to the courts, which automatically stays compliance.

The spokesman said counsel would take the case to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. He said the party's counsel in the case are Vito Marcantonio, former congressman from New York, and John J. Abt.

Dominated by Moscow

The four present members of the Subversive Activities Control Board agreed unanimously that the party "is substantially directed, dominated and controlled" by Moscow.

The party, the board said, "operates primarily to advance the objectives" of a Russian-directed world Communist movement.

The board's order was issued almost 19 months after former Atty. Gen. J. Howard McGrath started a registration proceeding against the party.

Indications are that it will be a year or more before the Supreme Court has the final say on constitutionality of the 1950 Internal Security (McCarran) Act under which the board acted.

The board was established by that act and authorized to determine whether any organization were directed from abroad and thus, under the act's terms forced to register with the attorney general and disclose the names of their members and financial details.

The board said its "subsidiary and puppet" label applies for the American party's entire existence beginning in 1919.

Humphrey Sees No Depression in Truce or Peace

New York, April 20 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey said today the United States is "not headed for depression" whether there is a truce in Korea or even a real peace.

"There is no reason to fear peace," he said.

In his first address since he took office in the Eisenhower administration, Humphrey outlined a fiscal policy that called for reduction in taxes when governmental expenses "are under control."

His address was for more than 1,000 editors and publishers attending the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press worldwide news gathering cooperative, at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

Army, Red Cross Cooperation Is Shown for Short

The speed with which the military and the Red Cross cooperated in getting Airman Albert R. Short, Jr., from Williams Air Force Base, Arizona, home after his father was seriously injured was revealed today with the family's permission.

Albert Short, Sr., of 39 Van Deusen street was injured Wednesday, April 15, in an automobile collision about 11:15 a. m. on Route 209 five miles south of Kingston. His condition was reported by the hospital this morning as "still serious, but slightly improved."

Emergency Verified

The Home Service director of Ulster County Chapter, American Red Cross, was notified of the accident and asked to arrange an emergency leave for Airman Short the same evening. After verifying the emergency, local Red Cross officials at 9:30 p. m. contacted officials in Arizona and by the time the local office opened Thursday morning, a telegram awaited stating that leave had been granted by the military. Arrangements for emergency leaves are made through the Red Cross but final decision rests with military authorities.

A Red Cross field director arranged for a TWA flight for Airman Short from Arizona, and he arrived in New York at 3 p. m. Thursday. He was at Kingston Hospital by 6 p. m. the same day.

Clinton Gardner, 40, who walked out on local police following a city court sentence nearly a year ago, again faced City Judge Raymond J. Mino today.

Gardner, who, police said, has no home, told Judge Mino today that he has a job in Albany, and the judge imposed a suspended sentence of 30 days in jail on the public intoxication charge.

Vandals Destroy Part of Foundation

Local police today moved to track down the persons responsible for an act of vandalism which is costly to the Kingston Model Railroad Club in time, labor and money.

Members of the club have been devoting spare time and energy to the building of an addition to the club quarters back of the McGill property, 541 Broadway, and yesterday, the vandals, believed to be youngsters, pushed down the freshly laid concrete-block foundation.

Henry P. Eighmey, the club's secretary-treasurer, who estimated damage at $100, notified police headquarters at 7:37 p. m. He said the damage was done between 4 and 7:30 p. m., when he discovered it.

Sections of the foundation, 28 by 30-foot, five and six tiers high, were knocked down, and some of the blocks were broken. Twice before, Eighmey said, dirt, which had been piled outside the excavation had been pushed back maliciously within the past two weeks.

The new structure is to be an addition on the south end of the present building. Club members worked on the foundation until about 4 p. m. Eighmey said more than half the completed work was destroyed.

Eighmey issued an emergency call, after discovering the damage, and other club members worked last night to get the concrete off the scattered blocks before it set.

Officers James Harbeck and Francis Loeffler were dispatched on the first investigation last night and Detectives Clarence Brophy and Frank Sammons were assigned today to track down the vandals.

Objection Is Heard Against Train Service Discontinuance

Objection to the discontinuance of the present train service on the Catskill Mountain Branch of the New York Central Railroad was voiced this morning at an adjourned hearing before Hearing Commissioner A. H. Williamson of the Public Service Commission. Two shippers who use the express facilities now offered and Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk objected to removal of the trains, the shippers on the grounds that the trucking service being offered would be inadequate and Mayor Newkirk on the grounds that removal of the trains would be a serious detriment to the communities served.

Says Trains Vital

Mayor Newkirk said that operation of the trains was an asset to the Catskill mountain area and the prosperity of the mountain area reflected in the amount of business which the city does. He said train service was of importance to new concerns desiring to locate in this area. One of the first questions asked by a concern desiring to locate in this area was the railroad facilities available. Removal of the service on the Mountain division would seriously affect the possibilities of new concerns locating in the area.

Testimony on the part of objecting citizens came after the railroad had closed its case following the offering of a contract between the railroad and the Lezette trucking firm of Saugerties under which Lezette would operate trucks between Kingston and Oneonta to handle the business now done by rail.

Testifies on Service

Clarence H. LaFond, assistant general passenger agent of this division, located at Albany, testified he had ridden the bus between Kingston and Oneonta and found the service good. He rode the Adirondack line bus which carried 55 passengers, three passengers were standing when the bus left Kingston. Back to Kingston he rode the Pine Hill-Kingston line which runs parallel to the railroad and that bus carried 57 pasengers. He told of the service and how the bus stopped in various communities, and in one, Glenford, it made four stops for passengers.

William R. Main, research engineer for the railroad who made a study of passenger traffic and recommended the abandonment of the service, went into the cost of placing Budd cars on the run. He said the small Budd car could not handle the express, mail and passenger traffic and the cost of operation of a Budd car would be greater than the present equipment. If two Budds were used the cost of the cars would be $165,000 each and the crew would remain the same as now. Operation of one Budd car would cost over 96 cents per mile and because of the grades and curves the car would not be satisfactory in winter. The run now earns about 83 cents per mile and to put a Budd car on would be entering into a deficit investment by the railroad. He stressed one Budd car could not handle the traffic. It costs about $1.40 per mile to operate the present equipment.

Tells of Requirements

William M. Smith, mail and express assistant manager, testified to requirements to handle mail and express.

A contract between the railroad and Lezette was offered under which Lezette agreed to operate two trucks between Kingston and Oneonta at a cost of $90 per day. Additional service would be available when needed.

Could Cancel Contract

John A. Larkin on cross examination inquired into the provisions of the contract which was drawn for a two year period. He pointed out the contract could be canceled by Lezette on 30 days notice and held the contract therefore was only a 30 day contract. He also argued that the contract contained a provision that the schedule could be added to or cut. This was denied by the railroad which held the service must be continued to the stations on the line.

The question of responsibility also came up. Larkin made inquiries as to who would be responsible for loss of shipments. William R. Stevens for the railroad stated the responsibility would remain with the railroad and express company. The contract between the railroad and Lezette contained a provision under which the railroad might recover loss from Lezette but the shipper would have no contract with the trucker and claims would be filed against the railroad and express company as now. Such a statement was finally put on the record following inquiry by Commissioner Williamson.

Service Not Satisfactory

Houston E. Landis, Jr., vice-president of the Rotron Manufacturing Company of Woodstock, called as the first witness after the railroad closed its case, said the truck service offered was not satisfactory since the truck would arrive later in the morning than the present train and the truck would arrive earlier in the afternoon. Landis said his company worked on a high priority schedule and frequently materials came in on the morning shipment which must be sent out again that afternoon. To cut the working day short to meet the truck would not work. He said if the truck was held afternoons until 5 o'clock to receive shipments that would be good.

Joseph F. Marr, president of a Bearsville company making lamps, also objected to the shortening of the time when shipments could be received and picked up. He said if the truck was held until 5 p. m. it would help his concern which has no storage space to hold over goods. It must be shipped the day completed.

Both Rotron and Marr said their shipments by express were in the neighborhood of $10,000 each per year.

An adjournment was taken until 2 p. m.

Executive Action Asked

New York, April 20 (AP)—The Police Conference of the State of New York has urged Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to back legalization of off-track betting on horse races, bingo and a state lottery to increase tax receipts. A telegram was sent to Dewey yesterday by John E. Carton, president of the Conference, an organization of 199 police groups with a claimed membership of 40,000. Carton asked that Dewey include the proposal in a message to the expected session of the Legislature, with a recommendation for amendment of the state constitution to permit such gambling. Carton also is president of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association of New York city.

Books Bill Is Vetoed

Albany, April 20 (AP)—A bill to help police chiefs and sheriffs clean up newsstands by seizing obscene pictures and publications was vetoed today by Gov. Dewey on constitutional ground. The measure was drawn by the joint legislative committee on comic books, which has been studying ways to keep publications dealing with sex and violence out of the hands of children.

It said two camps are in Manchuria and one each in Hopei, Jehol and Shensi provinces.

Concert Pianist Dies

New York, April 20 (AP)—Hellmut Baerwald, 50, concert pianist and conductor, died today in his Manhattan home after a brief illness. Baerwald, a native of Berlin, had lived in New York for 17 years. In addition to serving recently as assistant conductor with the New York City Center Opera Company, he made numerous concert tours in North and South America.

McKay Favors Seaway

Washington, April 20 (AP)—Interior Secretary McKay says he favors U. S. participation in the St. Lawrence seaway project, and in general favors allowing New York state to develop hydroelectric power on the St. Lawrence river and at Niagara Falls. McKay made the statements last night in a radio interview with the Bannett News Serviee. The secretary declared that wherever possible the federal government should not interfere with a state or with private enterprise in hydroelectric projects.

Heifetz Is in Italy

Rome, April 20 (AP)—Violinist Jascha Heifetz arrived by air from Tel Aviv today with his right hand still bandaged as a result of an attack in Jerusalem. A youth struck Heifetz early Friday with an iron bar, presumably because he had played music by German composer Richard Strauss in Israel. The violinist plans to start a two-month tour of Europe with a concert tomorrow night in Naples. Doctors in Tel Avid advised him to cancel his final concert in Israel, Saturday night.

Goodman Is Better

Boston, April 20 (AP)—Bandleader Benny Goodman, who collapsed twice yesterday, was reported "considerably better" today and plans to move him to a New York hospital were halted temporarily. The 43-year-old "King of Swing" of the 1930's was scheduled to be moved in an ambulance equipped with an oxygen tent. He spent the night in an oxygen tent in his Hotel Ritz-Carlton suite. A doctor said his condition was not serious enough to warrant immediate hospitalization.

Alarms Investigated

Police investigated two false alarms from Box 2121 at Chambers and East Union street over the week-end. The first was pulled at 11:40 p. m., Saturday, and the other at 12:55 a. m., Sunday. Officers James Harbeck and Meyer Levy were sent out to investigate the second alarm and Officers George Loughran and Harold Bowers were posted in the area to watch for other possible attempts.

Financial and Commercial

New York, April 20 (AP)—The stock market declined today to around the lowest levels of the year.

At the most the decline extended to around a point while scattered plus signs helped to bolster the list. These latter were small.

Most major divisions were lower. However, small gains showed up in railroads, chemicals, rubbers, merchandising shares and in scattered areas.

Lower stocks included Republic Steel, Studebaker, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, Radio Corp., American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda Copper, Dome Mines, American Cyanamid, General Electric, Pennsylvania Railroad, Southern Pacific, Sinclair Oil, United Airlines, 20th Century-Fox, and Johns-Manville.

United Aircraft hugged the upside. The navy disclosed it would step up its orders for jet engines made by United.

Western New York Has Slushy Snow

Albany, April 20 (AP)—A slushy hangover from winter plastered New York over the weekend with snow ranging up to eight inches.

Sardinia in southeast Erie county reported plows were sent into action against an overnight snowfall of six to eight inches.

Up to four inches fell in northern and mountain regions. Snow continued to fall in mid-morning from Malone, near the Canadian border, to Glens Falls.

The Weather Bureau said one to two inches of snow blanketed most of the rest of the state. Only the lower Hudson Valley escaped. It was clear in New York city.

Temperatures hovered around the freezing mark. The lowest readings were reported at Binghamton, 24, and Elmira, 25.

Forecasters predicted cloudy and windy weather for upstate tonight and tomorrow, with scattered snow flurries in the northern and western sections.

The Weather Burea said it would be "slightly warmer" tomorrow, with the possibility of "some sunshine."

Yoshida's Party Wins 42 Per Cent In Japan's House

Tokyo, April 20 (AP)—Pro-American Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida's Liberal party won 42 per cent of the seats in the powerful House of Representatives yesterday but Japan's political picture was as cloudy as ever.

Complete returns showed today that the second national election in seven months gave the Liberals 199 seats in the 466-member House—not enough to form a single party government. It was a loss of five seats.

Yoshida had staked his political future on the balloting, hoping for a majority. However, his foremost rivals lost strength and it was possible Yoshida would pick up enough outside strength to form his fifth cabinet.

The Communists placed one man in the House. They had none last time.

With only three seats in doubt, this was the lineup: Liberals, 199; Progressives, 75; Left Socialists, 72; Right Socialists, 66; Dissident Liberals, 35; Communist, 1; others, 17.

Slightly more than 35,000,000, or 73 per cent, of the electorate turned out.

The newspaper Asahi reported that the lone Communist who won election was Manichi Kawakami, running in a thickly populated industrial district in Osaka. Kawakami was a former member of the House.

Yoshida himself easily won re-election.

No date has been set for the House to meet and pick the prime minister.

Dewey Vetoes Measure

Albany, April 20 (AP)—A bill that would have required deer and bear hunters to wear license tags on their backs has been vetoed by Gov. Dewey because it would have made a violation a crime rather than a simple offense. Dewey noted in killing the measure Saturday that failure to wear the tag would have been a misdemeanor, "even if the hunter was licensed and the tag inadvertently lost while hunting."

U. S. Board Hits Communist Party As Soviet Puppet

Washington, April 20 (AP) — A government board today branded the U. S. Communist party as "a subsidiary and puppet of the Soviet Union" and ordered the party to bare its membership lists and give a financial accounting.

The order is subject to review by the courts.

In New York city, a spokesman for the party said the decision had been expected and that counsel had been instructed to take the case to the courts, which automatically stays compliance.

The spokesman said counsel would take the case to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. He said the party's counsel in the case are Vito Marcantonio, former congressman from New York, and John J. Abt.

Dominated by Moscow

The four present members of the Subversive Activities Control Board agreed unanimously that the party "is substantially directed, dominated and controlled" by Moscow.

The party, the board said, "operates primarily to advance the objectives" of a Russian-directed world Communist movement.

The board's order was issued almost 19 months after former Atty. Gen. J. Howard McGrath started a registration proceeding against the party.

Indications are that it will be a year or more before the Supreme Court has the final say on constitutionality of the 1950 Internal Security (McCarran) Act under which the board acted.

The board was established by that act and authorized to determine whether any organization were directed from abroad and thus, under the act's terms forced to register with the attorney general and disclose the names of their members and financial details.

The board said its "subsidiary and puppet" label applies for the American party's entire existence beginning in 1919.

Humphrey Sees No Depression in Truce or Peace

New York, April 20 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey said today the United States is "not headed for depression" whether there is a truce in Korea or even a real peace.

"There is no reason to fear peace," he said.

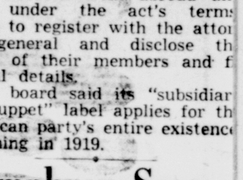

In his first address since he took office in the Eisenhower administration, Humphrey outlined a fiscal policy that called for reduction in taxes when governmental expenses "are under control."

His address was for more than 1,000 editors and publishers attending the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press worldwide news gathering cooperative, at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

The recent outbreak of juvenile delinquency in this community and in other areas as well re-emphasizes the need for greater responsibility for building character and imposing discipline among young people.

And the place to start is in the home, where it is to be expected that children will be supervised. The lack of parental supervision is responsible for the bad behavior of young people. If children are thrown on their own, and especially at night, they are bound to get into trouble.

The home, the school, the church and the social forces of the community are partners, but in order to achieve results they all must do everything within their power to guide and train America's youngsters wisely.

No high moral preachment on the subject is necessary. The wrong of it is clear enough to anyone who can read.

If parents will assume their obligation and responsibility to the children by properly supervising them, by getting acquainted with their companions, by raising them to respect the law and the property of others and by encouraging them to become useful citizens, they will solve the problem. The proof that it can be done may be seen in the millions of youngsters throughout the country who have had parental supervision.

The Ulster County Grand Jurors Association advocate a county-wide curfew which would take young boys and girls off the streets and highways at a reasonable hour evenings. They state that before every grand jury there are many cases of youthful offense, usually of a petty nature but often involving other boys who used the young children of from seven to 15 years of age as means of entering places.

A curfew law wholeheartedly supported by parents and strictly enforced will bring a decided drop in delinquency.

OLD RIVALRIES

Rivalry between the various branches of the armed forces was cited as one of the reasons for the Department of Defense move to curtail further public demonstration of new weapons. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said recently that this inter-service rivalry was leading to the disclosure of valuable secrets to hostile powers.

To maintain their strength the Army, Navy and Air Force depend on Congressional favor. High ranking officers in all these services believe that this favor can best be assured by keeping their own branch in the public eye. Demonstrations of new weapons and techniques is a good way to attract publicity. But if the publicity is paid for with a loss of inter-service cooperation the price is much too high.

It is time for old service rivalries to be buried and forgotten. The country needs an army, a navy and an air force. Each of these branches has a special function but each is part of the whole aim, the preservation of the safety of the United States. The Department of Defense was wise to eliminate public weapons tests if such tests endangered inter-service unity. Nothing less than full cooperation is to be expected from our armed forces.

TAFT'S STAND

Senator Robert A. Taft has allied himself with those who do not wish to see the end of the Korean war serve as an excuse for reducing our armed might. Taft is convinced that economies are possible, that the military budget submitted by former President Truman can be trimmed. But he does not believe that the end of the Korean fighting will affect how much money we must spend to remain strong.

If the fighting in Korea ends the menace of communism will not disappear. Korea itself will still be divided, one part of it still controlled by a Communist government quite capable of future aggression. The Reds all over the world are certain to maintain their strength. If we do not, they may regard our weakness as an invitation to attack.

Our only hope for peace and security lies in strength. Wishful thinking and over-eagerness to save money can be dangerous. Americans have never put a price on liberty and we cannot start to evaluate it in dollars and cents now. Taft is quite right in seeking to cut the military budget of items which will not reduce our armed might. There is some padding in every budget. But he is equally right in maintaining that we must remain strong whatever happens in Korea.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

THE LATTIMORE STORY

John T. Flynn has become America's foremost pamphleteer. At the drop of an argument, he sits himself down and writes a brochure setting forth the rights and wrongs of a situation. His "The Road Ahead" has become a best seller without the consent of the book reviewers, particularly the "New York Times" and the "New York Herald Tribune" experts who only too often fail to give a living book a favorable review, yet heap encomiums upon volumes that prove to be all wrong in good time.

John T. Flynn has written another pamphlet. This time it is called "The Lattimore Story." To avoid any misunderstanding, I counsel all my readers to purchase and to read this pamphlet and to see that the neighbors do the same. Very shortly a book by the Earl of Jowitt on Alger Hiss will appear on the market. (I already have a copy of the English edition of Jowitt's book and will write of it in due course). If you read Flynn's book first, you will understand Jowitt's better. Flynn is telling the downright truth; Jowitt is a British lawyer butting into something about which he knows too little.

So much for free advertising, which I do because most of the professional book reviews have ceased to be scholarly appraisals of the worth of a volume. They are rather plugs for colleagues; they are too often a part of a vast propaganda effort. Certainly on Far Eastern questions there has been an interlocking relationship between authors and book reviewers, centered in the Institute of Pacific Relations, that is little short of scandalous.

How the big reviewers, the "New York Times," the "New York Herald Tribune," and the "Saturday Review" justify the course they have pursued. I have never heard, but it seems ridiculous that the I.P.R. crowd had a virtual monopoly on book writing and book reviewing on the Far East.

Flynn explains how it was done and why, but whatever he says on the subject—and he says plenty shows how these great publications fell for this conspiracy within a conspiracy. And to prove how silly and unimportant these reviews are, two of Flynn's books, "The Roosevelt Myth" and "The Road Ahead," sold phenomenally in spite of them. Joe McCarthy's opus, "McCarthyism," also moved along despite the general adverse comment of those who bothered to review it. I sometimes wonder if these special book review journals do anything important for a book; they certainly have damaged some good books.

At any rate, they can no longer kill off a book because there are plenty of columnists and commentators who decline to fall in line. They will write book reviews if they think the book has news value or deals with the forces and events of our days. When, therefore, Flynn writes about Owen Lattimore, I know of three or four columnists and commentators who have a larger and more responsive circulation in this country than the graveyard book review journals who will go to bat for a good book.

Now, to say a little about Flynn's book. He has read the record of the Lattimore case and finds that it is "the most incredible conspiracy of our time." That Flynn puts on the top cover of his book. It is his pinion, after making a full study of the subject. He summarizes, in one place, the data from the record as produced before Congressional committees.

Lattimore is now before the courts on a perjury charge. Presumably, when Flynn wrote his book, he expected that the case would have been tried; instead it has been postponed until October. But Lattimore is a small figure in a vast operation undertaken by the Institute of Pacific Relations. Flynn feels that a certain point, Lattimore was the effective head of this group. I am sure at all times, E. C. Carter was the real boss and that Lattimore stood in a subordinate position to Carter. However this may be, the evidence is conclusive that perhaps 60 men and women, never elected to public office, obscurely situated, managed through the Institute of Pacific Relations not only to control the American policy in Asia, but controlled it in the interest of Soviet Russia.

This fact, rather than Owen Lattimore, is what is really important and what we need to understand. John T. Flynn makes it clear.

That Body of Yours

ACIDOSIS

One of the common expressions used when a person is feeling "heavy," "bilious," or "blue" is "acidosis," which we may unthinkingly believe to be an acid condition of the blood. This, of course, is impossible because it would mean death.

What is really meant by the word acidosis is that the blood, which is alkaline, is becoming less alkaline and so approaching nearer to an acid condition, but, of course, it never reaches the acid condition. Nature allows a slight drift from the "alkaline reserve" in the blood, the alkalinity, the P. H. being between 7.3 and 7.8. If below this, the condition is called acidosis.

In the Journal of Children's Diseases, Dr. R. Schmoger points out that the term acidosis suggests that the P. H. (alkalinity) of the blood and body fluids is below 7 but such a degree of acidity is not compatible with human life, acidosis simply meaning, as above stated, a deviation or drift away from its alkalinity toward acidity.

Dr. Schmoger describes his observations in the course of 300 examinations in 126 infants with digestive disturbances. These included 54 with simple disturbances, 49 with subtoxic (slightly poisonous) and 23 with toxic (poisonous) digestive disorders. An important observation was that with increasing reduction of the alkaline reserve, there was a decrease in abdominal breathing (natural healthy breathing) and an increase in chest breathing. "Studies on patients who were free from infection revealed that a blood leucocytosis (increase in the number of white corpuscles—disease fighters in the blood) showed a deviation or drift toward acidosis in the acid-base (alkaline) mechanism."

What does this mean as to condition and treatment of the patient? If a diagnosis has to be made between pylorospasm (heart burn) and digestive disturbances with diarrhoea and vomiting, a greatly reduced alkali reserve shows that there is a real digestive upset whereas heartburn would point to a nervous or emotional upset.

This information, showing that a decrease in the alkali reserve is causing the symptoms and requires treatment to increase the alkali reserve — cutting down on acid foods and increasing alkaline foods.

Alkaline foods are: milk, nuts, fruits (except cranberries, plums, prunes and rhubarb), vegetables.

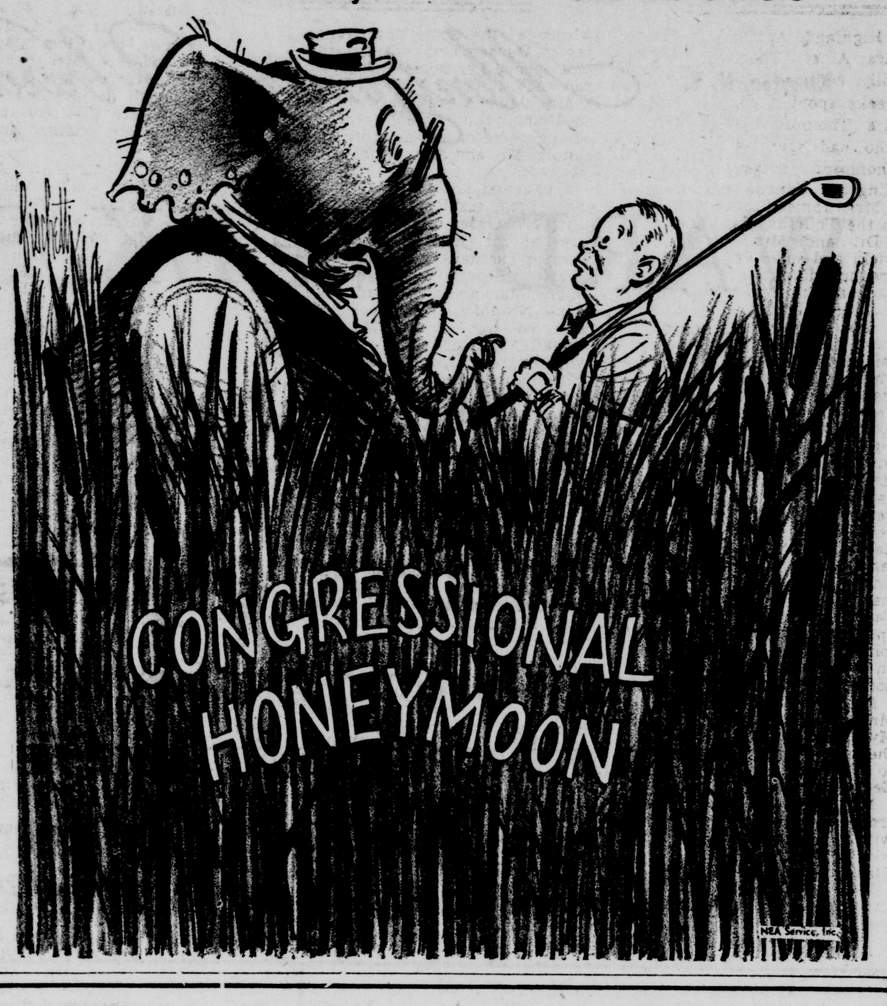

Acid foods are: meat, fish, poultry, eggs, breads of all kinds, cereals, pastries, puddings.

"This Hole's Easy---Wait'll Y'See the Others"

Edson's Washington News Notebook

By PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

Washington—(NEA)—When the Truman administration's $41 billion military budget for next year was tossed back at the Department of Defense by the Eisenhower administration, with instructions to cut it back to essentials, one of the younger staff officers who had worked on the original estimates sighed wearily and said:

"Well, I guess the first thing to do is get the Republican definition of an 'essential.'"

To date, this definition has never been put in writing. But program by program, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and his new Pentagon team have been cutting back manpower requirements and forcing reductions wherever they could. Best guess now is that the defense budget for the year beginning next July 1 will be cut by at least 10 per cent, or over $4 billion.

Assistant Secretary of Defense W. J. McNeil—an ex-admiral who has been kept over on the job of comptroller of the armed services by the new administration—was prouder of the original 1945 budget than any prepared since unification was begun.

When this budget was announced early in January, McNeil declared that there had been real service cooperation in its preparation. Nobody had raised a loud voice of protest over any decision. And for the first time there had been real consideration of the possibility of buying too much or too many of some 800 major items, led by tanks and trucks.

The size of the budget was determined not on the basis of how much money they thought they could get from Congress, or what the taxpayers would stand for. Instead, the first determination was how big an armed force the country had to maintain at home and abroad.

Broad Calculations to Figure Costs

Then they started figuring what it would cost to keep this force in being, with a reserve of all supplies needed for a full year of all-out war.

The size of the armed forces—a maximum of 3,700,000 men in all services—had been set by Congress before. Translated, that was enough manpower for a navy of 400 combat vessels, 77 naval air squadrons, three divisions of marines and three marine air wings; an army of 20 divisions plus 18 combat teams, the National Guard and the reserves; an air force now over 100 wings, to be increased gradually to 143.

The number of bases, camps and schools to be operated for this force was determined and the cost of their maintenance added up. The degree of modernization was decided on to find what equipment replacement costs would be.

This took into account such things as the fact that combat planes wear out in from three to five years, even when they're not in combat. The number of hours these planes could be flown for training purposes had to be determined, and the cost estimated.

All these and a lot more calculations like them are what really determined the size of next year's military budget.

The important point about cutting this budget is that any cuts mean some of these things won't get done, and there will be that much less national defense.

As of July 1, 1953, the Department of Defense estimates it will have a credit of some $62 billion in the Treasury—unspent but largely obligated for future spending. For next year an additional $41 billion of new spending authority was asked in January.

Congress Aimed at Carryovers

Originally, the services expected to write checks for about $43 billion worth of military pay, subsistence and supplies in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954. This would leave an unspent credit of $60 billion as of July 1, 1954.

Secretary Wilson points out you can't save money by cutting a credit for money not yet appropriated. Nevertheless, these large carryovers have been the special targets for congressional economy knife-throwers.

The fact that it takes a long time to tool up a factory and get into mass production on a new model plane, tank, gun or guided missile is what makes these carryover credits necessary. If the holdovers are cut back, it simply means that there will be fewer weapons available in the future than there would be otherwise.

Secretary Wilson has been polishing off plans to cut back on the defense production base. This means that a number of stand-by arms plants that have been running at less than peak capacity will be closed down entirely. Others will be put into full production, to cut down unit and total costs.

This will be a complete change from the defense production policies of C. E. Wilson, the former defense mobilization director.

But this whole subject of how broad a defense production base would be needed in case of all-out war is still undecided. Harold Vance of Studebaker ran a survey on it last year and came up with the answer that the presently planned base was far too small. His report was that it might take $2 billion or more in new plants. There's only half a billion for that in the Truman budget.

Eisenhower and Dulles Have Ended Fears of Any Appeasement Toward Russia

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, April 20—Whatever fears may have arisen that an appeasement policy by the United States toward Soviet Russia was in the making now have been dispelled not only by the challenging address of President Eisenhower but by the resolute, sharply worded and even tougher language used by the secretary of state, John Foster Dulles.

The Dulles address is significant because a fortnight ago he was reported as having uttered at a private dinner of news correspondents some speculative thoughts which aroused apprehensions in the minds of many members of Congress that the foreign policy of the administration was weakening at the very moment when critical negotiations were about to be begun. The story widely published was that the Nationalist government on Formosa was to be abandoned and a "divided Korea" was to be accepted.

The mystery of that dinner episode is yet to be clarified but now Soviet Russia and Red China have been told publicly that to the Nationalist government the United States is "speeding delivery of military assistance which was woefully in arrears" and that the U. S. Seventh Fleet "is still instructed to protect Formosa." This, incidentally, is the first clear-cut statement that says in effect—an attack by the Chinese Communists against Formosa will be resisted by the United States. Likewise Mr. Dulles talks of "the blockade of Communist China" as in existence and speaks of "tightening" it. He also warns that our acceptance of an armistice in Korea is based on the "assumption that it will lead to a peace which accords with the principles of the United Nations—and that means a free and united Korea."

Mr. Dulles made many other points that fill out and strengthen the principles laid down in the Eisenhower address of last week.

Thus it is revealed officially for the first time that administration policy on rearmament no longer is to converge toward what Mr. Dulles refers to as "danger at some early predictable date" and that our European allies and the United States now will base their military preparations on a plan that will aim for substantial insurance against being overrun by Soviet attack" but with programs that "can, if necessary, be sustained for an indefinite period with growing reliance on western Europe's own strength."

This means in practical terms a "stretch-out" for a number of years and a military spending program hereafter that is stabilized and will continue on a large scale no matter what Soviet Russia says or does in the near future.

The most important point disclosed by the Secretary of State, however, was the announcement of how America has decided to treat in a long-range sense the Soviet peace moves. Here are the exact words the secretary used:

"But we cannot yet tell whether this represents a basic change or merely a tactical shift. It is prudent, for the present, to assume that we are witnessing a tactical move of the kind which Soviet communism has often practiced."

This means there will be full steam ahead on all fronts just as if Moscow had not issued honeyed words lately. This is coupled with a warning that Japan, Indo-china, Malaya and Korea now face a "single hostile front" and that the United States, contrary to what Secretary Acheson said in January 1950, considers Korea to be a part of America's defense line against Communist imperialism. For those who have been saying there isn't much difference as yet between the Acheson and Dulles policies the foreging is worth pondering, as is also the sharp reminder that an armistice in Korea will be considered to be violated and "serious consequences would follow" if the Communists step up their military operations in Malaya and Indo-china as a result of the truce in Korea.

The speech draws together France, Britain, Germany and our Far Eastern associates in a common purpose to warn the aggressors that the United States and its allies "are not dancing to any Russian tune" and that "nothing that has happened has induced in us a mood of relaxation or any desire to weaken the North Atlantic Treaty Organization." Indeed, the moral support given the European defense army by both the Eisenhower and Dulles addresses is unequivocal and firm.

Even the "liberation" concept is stimulated — thus contradicting those who have tried to read some significance into the fact that President Eisenhower didn't mention this in his speech and hence had abandoned the idea. Perhaps the reason was that he had arranged in advance with the secretary of state to proclaim that, notwithstanding the partisanship into which the resolution in Congress denouncing the Yalta agreements had become entangled, the executive—as the maker of foreign policy—"has formulated his position." For the United States through the secretary of state says to peoples of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania, Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia that "we do not accept their captivity as a permanent fact of history." Mr. Dulles adds:

"If they thought otherwise and became hopeless, we would unwittingly have become partners in the forging of a hostile power so vast that it would encompass our destruction."

That's the policy proclaimed during the last campaign and it is refreshing to see it reiterated clearly and vigorously. Indeed the whole Dulles address is so forthright that together with the Eisenhower speech it represents what the United States now is saying formally to our allies and to Soviet Russia. It constitutes a positive and dynamic program. It embodies those worth-while principles for which America has always stood. It supplements them with decisions that show an America unafraid to face whatever calculated risks may emerge from any invigorated and revised foreign policy.

Plans to Get Government Out of Business Move Ahead

By SAM DAWSON

New York, April 20 (AP)—The move to get government out of business is getting up steam. And at the same time the move to encourage business by incentive tax-cuts seems a little closer to reality.

Action on both sides of the Atlantic this week point up the trend away from big government and toward more reliance on individuals and private business to do the job when the incentives are there.

The rubber industry and the private electric power industry are the latest to have their hopes aroused.

President Eisenhower has given his blessing to the plan to sell the government-owned synthetic rubber plants to private companies for production of this wartime essential and highly successful peacetime commodity.

Former President Hoover is urging that the government halt its inroads into the electric power business and put its reliance on priviate initiative and competition.

Bankers and investors have already seen the relaxing of the U. S. Treasury's hold on interest rates and cheap money, and the return of the management of the money and credit supply to the Federal Reserve banks. The heavily oversubscribed new long-term government bond offered this week is but the latest in several steps in this direction.

Earlier, too, were the ending of price and wage controls, and the relaxing of most material controls.

Business, finance and industry thus are working back toward the free economy of an earlier period.

Through periods of war and depression the government steadily moved into business. It built and operated plants. It is a sort of guaranteeing partner of the farmer and the home builder. For a time it was the sole purchaser and seller of such commodities as tin and rubber. It prodded the steel industry into building more mills by threatening otherwise to build government steel plants.

Switch May Be Slow

The switch back may be slow, but it is steady and those businessmen who criticized the former trend toward big government are now taking heart.

Another step eagerly urged by many businessmen is the promised cut in taxes to provide incentives for more efficient business management and increased investments.

Americans note today that the British have beat them to it. London is cutting taxes. Personal and corporate income taxes are going down. Businessmen are getting more liberal depreciation allowances. And the excess profits tax is to end January 1.

The British treasury could use all these revenues it is foregoing. But the London government aims at higher and more efficient industrial production and says that lower taxes will furnish the incentive. Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler says: "We must banish the hopeless feeling that extra effort is not worthwhile."

The American taxpayer's day of relief hasn't yet dawned. But House leaders say that perhaps by mid-May they'll know if they can cut the budget enough to cut income tax rates. Pressure from around the country for tax cuts now is building up.

And House leaders say they doubt if the machinery of that body could operate fast enough now to pass a bill extending the excess profits tax beyond its June death-date.

Businessmen contend that the death of EPT and lowering of income tax rates would do more than anything else to offset fears of a slump in business activity.

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

The recent outbreak of juvenile delinquency in this community and in other areas as well re-emphasizes the need for greater responsibility for building character and imposing discipline among young people.

And the place to start is in the home, where it is to be expected that children will be supervised. The lack of parental supervision is responsible for the bad behavior of young people. If children are thrown on their own, and especially at night, they are bound to get into trouble.

The home, the school, the church and the social forces of the community are partners, but in order to achieve results they all must do everything within their power to guide and train America's youngsters wisely.

No high moral preachment on the subject is necessary. The wrong of it is clear enough to anyone who can read.

If parents will assume their obligation and responsibility to the children by properly supervising them, by getting acquainted with their companions, by raising them to respect the law and the property of others and by encouraging them to become useful citizens, they will solve the problem. The proof that it can be done may be seen in the millions of youngsters throughout the country who have had parental supervision.

The Ulster County Grand Jurors Association advocate a county-wide curfew which would take young boys and girls off the streets and highways at a reasonable hour evenings. They state that before every grand jury there are many cases of youthful offense, usually of a petty nature but often involving other boys who used the young children of from seven to 15 years of age as means of entering places.

A curfew law wholeheartedly supported by parents and strictly enforced will bring a decided drop in delinquency.

OLD RIVALRIES

Rivalry between the various branches of the armed forces was cited as one of the reasons for the Department of Defense move to curtail further public demonstration of new weapons. Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson said recently that this inter-service rivalry was leading to the disclosure of valuable secrets to hostile powers.

To maintain their strength the Army, Navy and Air Force depend on Congressional favor. High ranking officers in all these services believe that this favor can best be assured by keeping their own branch in the public eye. Demonstrations of new weapons and techniques is a good way to attract publicity. But if the publicity is paid for with a loss of inter-service cooperation the price is much too high.

It is time for old service rivalries to be buried and forgotten. The country needs an army, a navy and an air force. Each of these branches has a special function but each is part of the whole aim, the preservation of the safety of the United States. The Department of Defense was wise to eliminate public weapons tests if such tests endangered inter-service unity. Nothing less than full cooperation is to be expected from our armed forces.

TAFT'S STAND

Senator Robert A. Taft has allied himself with those who do not wish to see the end of the Korean war serve as an excuse for reducing our armed might. Taft is convinced that economies are possible, that the military budget submitted by former President Truman can be trimmed. But he does not believe that the end of the Korean fighting will affect how much money we must spend to remain strong.

If the fighting in Korea ends the menace of communism will not disappear. Korea itself will still be divided, one part of it still controlled by a Communist government quite capable of future aggression. The Reds all over the world are certain to maintain their strength. If we do not, they may regard our weakness as an invitation to attack.

Our only hope for peace and security lies in strength. Wishful thinking and over-eagerness to save money can be dangerous. Americans have never put a price on liberty and we cannot start to evaluate it in dollars and cents now. Taft is quite right in seeking to cut the military budget of items which will not reduce our armed might. There is some padding in every budget. But he is equally right in maintaining that we must remain strong whatever happens in Korea.

THE LATTIMORE STORY

John T. Flynn has become America's foremost pamphleteer. At the drop of an argument, he sits himself down and writes a brochure setting forth the rights and wrongs of a situation. His "The Road Ahead" has become a best seller without the consent of the book reviewers, particularly the "New York Times" and the "New York Herald Tribune" experts who only too often fail to give a living book a favorable review, yet heap encomiums upon volumes that prove to be all wrong in good time.

John T. Flynn has written another pamphlet. This time it is called "The Lattimore Story." To avoid any misunderstanding, I counsel all my readers to purchase and to read this pamphlet and to see that the neighbors do the same. Very shortly a book by the Earl of Jowitt on Alger Hiss will appear on the market. (I already have a copy of the English edition of Jowitt's book and will write of it in due course). If you read Flynn's book first, you will understand Jowitt's better. Flynn is telling the downright truth; Jowitt is a British lawyer butting into something about which he knows too little.

So much for free advertising, which I do because most of the professional book reviews have ceased to be scholarly appraisals of the worth of a volume. They are rather plugs for colleagues; they are too often a part of a vast propaganda effort. Certainly on Far Eastern questions there has been an interlocking relationship between authors and book reviewers, centered in the Institute of Pacific Relations, that is little short of scandalous.

How the big reviewers, the "New York Times," the "New York Herald Tribune," and the "Saturday Review" justify the course they have pursued. I have never heard, but it seems ridiculous that the I.P.R. crowd had a virtual monopoly on book writing and book reviewing on the Far East.

Flynn explains how it was done and why, but whatever he says on the subject—and he says plenty shows how these great publications fell for this conspiracy within a conspiracy. And to prove how silly and unimportant these reviews are, two of Flynn's books, "The Roosevelt Myth" and "The Road Ahead," sold phenomenally in spite of them. Joe McCarthy's opus, "McCarthyism," also moved along despite the general adverse comment of those who bothered to review it. I sometimes wonder if these special book review journals do anything important for a book; they certainly have damaged some good books.

At any rate, they can no longer kill off a book because there are plenty of columnists and commentators who decline to fall in line. They will write book reviews if they think the book has news value or deals with the forces and events of our days. When, therefore, Flynn writes about Owen Lattimore, I know of three or four columnists and commentators who have a larger and more responsive circulation in this country than the graveyard book review journals who will go to bat for a good book.

Now, to say a little about Flynn's book. He has read the record of the Lattimore case and finds that it is "the most incredible conspiracy of our time." That Flynn puts on the top cover of his book. It is his pinion, after making a full study of the subject. He summarizes, in one place, the data from the record as produced before Congressional committees.

Lattimore is now before the courts on a perjury charge. Presumably, when Flynn wrote his book, he expected that the case would have been tried; instead it has been postponed until October. But Lattimore is a small figure in a vast operation undertaken by the Institute of Pacific Relations. Flynn feels that a certain point, Lattimore was the effective head of this group. I am sure at all times, E. C. Carter was the real boss and that Lattimore stood in a subordinate position to Carter. However this may be, the evidence is conclusive that perhaps 60 men and women, never elected to public office, obscurely situated, managed through the Institute of Pacific Relations not only to control the American policy in Asia, but controlled it in the interest of Soviet Russia.

This fact, rather than Owen Lattimore, is what is really important and what we need to understand. John T. Flynn makes it clear.

And for the first time there had been real consideration of the possibility of buying too much or too many of some 800 major items, led by tanks and trucks.

The size of the budget was determined not on the basis of how much money they thought they could get from Congress, or what the taxpayers would stand for. Instead, the first determination was how big an armed force the country had to maintain at home and abroad.

Broad Calculations to Figure Costs

Then they started figuring what it would cost to keep this force in being, with a reserve of all supplies needed for a full year of all-out war.

The size of the armed forces—a maximum of 3,700,000 men in all services—had been set by Congress before. Translated, that was enough manpower for a navy of 400 combat vessels, 77 naval air squadrons, three divisions of marines and three marine air wings; an army of 20 divisions plus 18 combat teams, the National Guard and the reserves; an air force now over 100 wings, to be increased gradually to 143.

The number of bases, camps and schools to be operated for this force was determined and the cost of their maintenance added up. The degree of modernization was decided on to find what equipment replacement costs would be.

This took into account such things as the fact that combat planes wear out in from three to five years, even when they're not in combat. The number of hours these planes could be flown for training purposes had to be determined, and the cost estimated.

All these and a lot more calculations like them are what really determined the size of next year's military budget.

The important point about cutting this budget is that any cuts mean some of these things won't get done, and there will be that much less national defense.

As of July 1, 1953, the Department of Defense estimates it will have a credit of some $62 billion in the Treasury—unspent but largely obligated for future spending. For next year an additional $41 billion of new spending authority was asked in January.

Congress Aimed at Carryovers

Originally, the services expected to write checks for about $43 billion worth of military pay, subsistence and supplies in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1954. This would leave an unspent credit of $60 billion as of July 1, 1954.

Secretary Wilson points out you can't save money by cutting a credit for money not yet appropriated. Nevertheless, these large carryovers have been the special targets for congressional economy knife-throwers.

The fact that it takes a long time to tool up a factory and get into mass production on a new model plane, tank, gun or guided missile is what makes these carryover credits necessary. If the holdovers are cut back, it simply means that there will be fewer weapons available in the future than there would be otherwise.

Secretary Wilson has been polishing off plans to cut back on the defense production base. This means that a number of stand-by arms plants that have been running at less than peak capacity will be closed down entirely. Others will be put into full production, to cut down unit and total costs.

This will be a complete change from the defense production policies of C. E. Wilson, the former defense mobilization director.

But this whole subject of how broad a defense production base would be needed in case of all-out war is still undecided. Harold Vance of Studebaker ran a survey on it last year and came up with the answer that the presently planned base was far too small. His report was that it might take $2 billion or more in new plants. There's only half a billion for that in the Truman budget.

Eisenhower and Dulles Have Ended Fears of Any Appeasement Toward Russia

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, April 20—Whatever fears may have arisen that an appeasement policy by the United States toward Soviet Russia was in the making now have been dispelled not only by the challenging address of President Eisenhower but by the resolute, sharply worded and even tougher language used by the secretary of state, John Foster Dulles.

The Dulles address is significant because a fortnight ago he was reported as having uttered at a private dinner of news correspondents some speculative thoughts which aroused apprehensions in the minds of many members of Congress that the foreign policy of the administration was weakening at the very moment when critical negotiations were about to be begun. The story widely published was that the Nationalist government on Formosa was to be abandoned and a "divided Korea" was to be accepted.

The mystery of that dinner episode is yet to be clarified but now Soviet Russia and Red China have been told publicly that to the Nationalist government the United States is "speeding delivery of military assistance which was woefully in arrears" and that the U. S. Seventh Fleet "is still instructed to protect Formosa." This, incidentally, is the first clear-cut statement that says in effect—an attack by the Chinese Communists against Formosa will be resisted by the United States. Likewise Mr. Dulles talks of "the blockade of Communist China" as in existence and speaks of "tightening" it. He also warns that our acceptance of an armistice in Korea is based on the "assumption that it will lead to a peace which accords with the principles of the United Nations—and that means a free and united Korea."

Mr. Dulles made many other points that fill out and strengthen the principles laid down in the Eisenhower address of last week.

Thus it is revealed officially for the first time that administration policy on rearmament no longer is to converge toward what Mr. Dulles refers to as "danger at some early predictable date" and that our European allies and the United States now will base their military preparations on a plan that will aim for substantial insurance against being overrun by Soviet attack" but with programs that "can, if necessary, be sustained for an indefinite period with growing reliance on western Europe's own strength."

This means in practical terms a "stretch-out" for a number of years and a military spending program hereafter that is stabilized and will continue on a large scale no matter what Soviet Russia says or does in the near future.

The most important point disclosed by the Secretary of State, however, was the announcement of how America has decided to treat in a long-range sense the Soviet peace moves. Here are the exact words the secretary used:

"But we cannot yet tell whether this represents a basic change or merely a tactical shift. It is prudent, for the present, to assume that we are witnessing a tactical move of the kind which Soviet communism has often practiced."

This means there will be full steam ahead on all fronts just as if Moscow had not issued honeyed words lately. This is coupled with a warning that Japan, Indo-china, Malaya and Korea now face a "single hostile front" and that the United States, contrary to what Secretary Acheson said in January 1950, considers Korea to be a part of America's defense line against Communist imperialism. For those who have been saying there isn't much difference as yet between the Acheson and Dulles policies the foreging is worth pondering, as is also the sharp reminder that an armistice in Korea will be considered to be violated and "serious consequences would follow" if the Communists step up their military operations in Malaya and Indo-china as a result of the truce in Korea.

The speech draws together France, Britain, Germany and our Far Eastern associates in a common purpose to warn the aggressors that the United States and its allies "are not dancing to any Russian tune" and that "nothing that has happened has induced in us a mood of relaxation or any desire to weaken the North Atlantic Treaty Organization." Indeed, the moral support given the European defense army by both the Eisenhower and Dulles addresses is unequivocal and firm.

Even the "liberation" concept is stimulated — thus contradicting those who have tried to read some significance into the fact that President Eisenhower didn't mention this in his speech and hence had abandoned the idea. Perhaps the reason was that he had arranged in advance with the secretary of state to proclaim that, notwithstanding the partisanship into which the resolution in Congress denouncing the Yalta agreements had become entangled, the executive—as the maker of foreign policy—"has formulated his position." For the United States through the secretary of state says to peoples of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania, Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia that "we do not accept their captivity as a permanent fact of history." Mr. Dulles adds:

"If they thought otherwise and became hopeless, we would unwittingly have become partners in the forging of a hostile power so vast that it would encompass our destruction."

That's the policy proclaimed during the last campaign and it is refreshing to see it reiterated clearly and vigorously. Indeed the whole Dulles address is so forthright that together with the Eisenhower speech it represents what the United States now is saying formally to our allies and to Soviet Russia. It constitutes a positive and dynamic program. It embodies those worth-while principles for which America has always stood. It supplements them with decisions that show an America unafraid to face whatever calculated risks may emerge from any invigorated and revised foreign policy.

Plans to Get Government Out of Business Move Ahead

By SAM DAWSON

New York, April 20 (AP)—The move to get government out of business is getting up steam. And at the same time the move to encourage business by incentive tax-cuts seems a little closer to reality.

Action on both sides of the Atlantic this week point up the trend away from big government and toward more reliance on individuals and private business to do the job when the incentives are there.

The rubber industry and the private electric power industry are the latest to have their hopes aroused.

President Eisenhower has given his blessing to the plan to sell the government-owned synthetic rubber plants to private companies for production of this wartime essential and highly successful peacetime commodity.

Former President Hoover is urging that the government halt its inroads into the electric power business and put its reliance on priviate initiative and competition.

Bankers and investors have already seen the relaxing of the U. S. Treasury's hold on interest rates and cheap money, and the return of the management of the money and credit supply to the Federal Reserve banks. The heavily oversubscribed new long-term government bond offered this week is but the latest in several steps in this direction.

Earlier, too, were the ending of price and wage controls, and the relaxing of most material controls.

Business, finance and industry thus are working back toward the free economy of an earlier period.

Through periods of war and depression the government steadily moved into business. It built and operated plants. It is a sort of guaranteeing partner of the farmer and the home builder. For a time it was the sole purchaser and seller of such commodities as tin and rubber. It prodded the steel industry into building more mills by threatening otherwise to build government steel plants.

Switch May Be Slow

The switch back may be slow, but it is steady and those businessmen who criticized the former trend toward big government are now taking heart.

Another step eagerly urged by many businessmen is the promised cut in taxes to provide incentives for more efficient business management and increased investments.

Americans note today that the British have beat them to it. London is cutting taxes. Personal and corporate income taxes are going down. Businessmen are getting more liberal depreciation allowances. And the excess profits tax is to end January 1.

The British treasury could use all these revenues it is foregoing. But the London government aims at higher and more efficient industrial production and says that lower taxes will furnish the incentive. Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler says: "We must banish the hopeless feeling that extra effort is not worthwhile."

The American taxpayer's day of relief hasn't yet dawned. But House leaders say that perhaps by mid-May they'll know if they can cut the budget enough to cut income tax rates. Pressure from around the country for tax cuts now is building up.

And House leaders say they doubt if the machinery of that body could operate fast enough now to pass a bill extending the excess profits tax beyond its June death-date.

Businessmen contend that the death of EPT and lowering of income tax rates would do more than anything else to offset fears of a slump in business activity.

Governor Vetoes Bill to Prohibit Orders on Sunday

Albany, April 20 (AP) — Gov. Dewey wants more legislative study before he approves any blue law measure to prohibit merchants from taking orders by telephone or telegraph on Sunday.

The governor vetoed such a bill yesterday, along with one that would have eased the present penalties against merchants caught selling their wares illegally on the Sabbath.

He said in a memorandum that "because of the divergency of views that have been expressed concerning the legal effect of these bills and the possibility that they might have unintended results, I am disapproving them at this time to permit further study."

The joint legislative committee to study the Sabbath laws, created last year, presumably will come up next year with a new version of the measures.

The group, which spearheaded a successful campaign in 1952 to liberalize blue laws affecting spectator and participation sports, is headed by Republican Assemblyman Malcolm Wilson of Yonkers.

Tonight Is Deadline

Midnight tonight is the deadline for the governor to sign or veto the last of the 1,080 bills left him by the 1953 Legislature, As is his custom, he will act upon all of them, and not use a "pocket veto" to kill any of the measures. If he should take no action on any measure, it would die automatically.

As he started work today, Dewey had 81 bills to go. So far, he signed 701 and vetoed 298. Another 132 were signed while the Senate and Assembly were in session.

The joint legislative committee recommended approval of the two Sunday law changes that Dewey vetoed.

The bill against the taking of orders by telephone was directed at merchants who include in their Sunday advertisements an invitation for customers to telephone or telegraph their orders immediately.

The second bill would have softened a section of the penal law that permits the seizure by authorities of a merchant's entire stock if he is caught selling illegally on Sunday. The bill would have restricted the forefeiture to the particular type of merchandise offered for sale illegally.

Other Bills Approved

Dewey approved three other committee bills Saturday. They permit the sale of magazines on the Sabbath, the holding of Sunday parades if local officials approve, and sales of prepared foods by grocers from 4 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. Previously, only delicatessens and bakeries were permitted to make such sales.

The committee said in a special report that the Sunday telephone practice was "an outstanding illustration of violation of the spirit of" the state's blue laws.

"This gives some merchants . . . an unfair advantage over their competitors, and appears to be . . . a deliberate avoidance of the intent of the state statute," the group said.

It also contended that the present forfeiture provisions "could subject minor offenders to extremely harsh and improvident punishment."

Dewey also vetoed three bills that would have permitted county offices to close on Saturday. But he approved two other measures that authorize such offices until Sept. 9, 1954, to close on Saturday from July 1 to Labor Day. He said that if the plan worked out well for two years, it should be made permanent.

The governor vetoed other bills that would have:

Revised and recodified the state's ancient trademark law. He urged that the legislature try to rewrite it further.

Prevented New York city from regulating the height of proposed housing developments.

The governor approved measures that:

Authorize villages to appropriate "sufficient" funds for surveys to promote efficient government.

Permit Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri and other New York city employes to count their World War 1 service in the armed forces toward their eventual city pensions. The mayor served more than a year as a radioman on a destroyer.

Permission Is Granted For Treasure Storage

Albany, April 20 (AP) — The owners of a bomb-proof vault built in an abandoned Columbia county iron mine today had the state's permission to ask the federal government to let it store foreign-owned treasures free of customs duties.

A bill signed yesterday by Gov. Dewey gave the Iron Mountain Atomic Storage Corp. authority to request the U. S. Customs Bureau to declare the big shelter near Germantown a foreign trade zone.

The measure was introduced by the Assembly rules committee at the request of Assemblyman Willard C. Drumm, Columbia county Republican.

Governor Vetoes Bill to Prohibit Orders on Sunday

Albany, April 20 (AP) — Gov. Dewey wants more legislative study before he approves any blue law measure to prohibit merchants from taking orders by telephone or telegraph on Sunday.

The governor vetoed such a bill yesterday, along with one that would have eased the present penalties against merchants caught selling their wares illegally on the Sabbath.

He said in a memorandum that "because of the divergency of views that have been expressed concerning the legal effect of these bills and the possibility that they might have unintended results, I am disapproving them at this time to permit further study."

The joint legislative committee to study the Sabbath laws, created last year, presumably will come up next year with a new version of the measures.

The group, which spearheaded a successful campaign in 1952 to liberalize blue laws affecting spectator and participation sports, is headed by Republican Assemblyman Malcolm Wilson of Yonkers.

Tonight Is Deadline

Midnight tonight is the deadline for the governor to sign or veto the last of the 1,080 bills left him by the 1953 Legislature. As is his custom, he will act upon all of them, and not use a "pocket veto" to kill any of the measures. If he should take no action on any measure, it would die automatically.

As he started work today, Dewey had 81 bills to go. So far, he signed 701 and vetoed 298. Another 132 were signed while the Senate and Assembly were in session.

The joint legislative committee recommended approval of the two Sunday law changes that Dewey vetoed.

The bill against the taking of orders by telephone was directed at merchants who include in their Sunday advertisements an invitation for customers to telephone or telegraph their orders immediately.

The second bill would have softened a section of the penal law that permits the seizure by authorities of a merchant's entire stock if he is caught selling illegally on Sunday. The bill would have restricted the forefeiture to the particular type of merchandise offered for sale illegally.

Other Bills Approved

Dewey approved three other committee bills Saturday. They permit the sale of magazines on the Sabbath, the holding of Sunday parades if local officials approve, and sales of prepared foods by grocers from 4 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. Previously, only delicatessens and bakeries were permitted to make such sales.

The committee said in a special report that the Sunday telephone practice was "an outstanding illustration of violation of the spirit of" the state's blue laws.

"This gives some merchants . . . an unfair advantage over their competitors, and appears to be . . . a deliberate avoidance of the intent of the state statute," the group said.

It also contended that the present forfeiture provisions "could subject minor offenders to extremely harsh and improvident punishment."

Dewey also vetoed three bills that would have permitted county offices to close on Saturday. But he approved two other measures that authorize such offices until Sept. 9, 1954, to close on Saturday from July 1 to Labor Day. He said that if the plan worked out well for two years, it should be made permanent.

The governor vetoed other bills that would have:

Revised and recodified the state's ancient trademark law. He urged that the legislature try to rewrite it further.

Prevented New York city from regulating the height of proposed housing developments.

The governor approved measures that:

Authorize villages to appropriate "sufficient" funds for surveys to promote efficient government.

Permit Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri and other New York city employes to count their World War 1 service in the armed forces toward their eventual city pensions. The mayor served more than a year as a radioman on a destroyer.

Permission Is Granted For Treasure Storage

Albany, April 20 (AP) — The owners of a bomb-proof vault built in an abandoned Columbia county iron mine today had the state's permission to ask the federal government to let it store foreign-owned treasures free of customs duties.

A bill signed yesterday by Gov. Dewey gave the Iron Mountain Atomic Storage Corp. authority to request the U. S. Customs Bureau to declare the big shelter near Germantown a foreign trade zone.

The measure was introduced by the Assembly rules committee at the request of Assemblyman Willard C. Drumm, Columbia county Republican.

Local Youths Cited For Telescope at Oneonta Meeting

A telescope built by three Kingston youths was awarded first prize in the general science competition during the 12th Oneonta Science Conference for elementary and high school pupils.

The local youths who built the telescope are Robert Donnaruma, Joseph Bonacci and Gerald Fisher.

The award to the local youths was one of many announced today by The Oneonta Daily Star, Hartwick College and the Smith-Dewar Foundation at Hartwick, sponsors of the conference.

According to the Associated Press, John Bredesen, 18, of Highland Falls, won a $450 scholarship to Hartwick College by taking first prize in the physics contest.

Bredesen's exhibit on remote house light also was chosen Saturday to represent the conference at the National Science Fair at Oak Ridge, Tenn., next month.

Bredesen was named one of three delegates to the State Science Congress in Troy May 22-23. Others elected were Alice Shaffer of Endicott, winner of the biology division, and Joseph Dolfini of Middletown, the chemistry winner.

Building a radio, the AP reported, won Dillon Maier of Sququoit the motor and radio-building contest sponsored by the Johnson City Westinghouse Electric Company plant.

Ravine Street Man Hurt As Vehicle Strikes Pole

Thomas DeAngelis, 17, of 73 Ravine street, was treated at Kingston Hospital for minor cuts and bruises of the face and head after the car in which he was riding struck a pole early Sunday at Montrepose avenue and West Chestnut street.

Officers James Harbeck and Meyer Levy reported at 2:20 a. m., that the car, driven by William DeAngelis, of the same address, was going west on West Chestnut street and turning left into Montrepose avenue, when it skidded into a pole of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp.

The officers reported the pole, which supported a transformer, was badly shattered. Central Hudson was notified and made temporary repairs. The mishap did not throw out electric service.

Thomas DeAngelis was taken to the hospital in a police patrol car.

Mayor Will Confer Upon Thruway Problem for City

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today he is scheduled to confer with B. D. Tallamy, chairman of the New York State Thruway Authority, at 11 a. m., tomorrow, to emphasize further the city's traffic problem if the Onteora Trail, Route 28, is temporarily connected with the thruway.

The state has given no definite assurance that the express highway will not be temporarily connected with Route 28 when the Kingston-Sawkill strip is finished, despite two requests from the mayor.

May Avoid Interchange

The mayor's letters emphasized the problem of the narrow Washington avenue viaduct and new congestion in cluttered uptown streets, but each reply from the state indicated no abandonment of plans for a temporary interchange a few hundred feet west of the city.

A recent letter from Tallamy's office implied that if congestion developes, the public would avoid the interchange. It mentioned no contemplated action to abandon present plans, and said highway officials felt from past experiences, that public pressure favors the opening of any newly completed strip of highway.

The mayor proposed that truck traffic enter and leave the thruway at Saugerties as at present, and that passenger cars continue to enter and leave at Lake Katrine until the strip between Kingston and Whiteport is ready for traffic.

The recent state letter indicated that the interval between completion of the two strips would not be long, but did not say how long it would be.

Joy Is Note

who had been listed as killed in action, was among the returnees at Freedom Village. Only two days ago she had received a letter from him, however, assuring her he was well and healthy.

"I'm happy, how would you feel?" said Mrs. Lawley.

The name of Lt. Roy M. Jones was the magic word that brought a smile through the tears of his mother, Mrs. Roy P. Jones of Minneapolis. Jones was presumed dead by the War Department for more than a year when five soldiers reported they saw him bleeding to death from machine gun wounds. He was captured in November, 1950. Mrs. Jones, ill for several years, at one time weighed only 80 pounds. The father said they had not expected their son to be repatriated since he had written he had recovered completely.

Mrs. Sally Blue of Highland Park, Mich., listened for hours last night, hoping to hear her son, Pvt. Jesse Robertson, 18, had been freed. Finally she went to bed—and newsmen awakened her to tell her she hadn't listened long enough. Jesse, who had been missing since last November, soon would be coming home.

'Sure Am Happy'

"Lord, Lord, I sure am happy," was the robust comment of Mrs. William Brock of Rome, Ga., when she heard her son, Pvt. William R. Brock Jr., was coming home from the Reds' prisoner of war camp. "I reckon I was just about to worry myself crazy about my boy. He's been a prisoner since November, 1951."

Mrs. Annie Porter Thomas of Oakdale, La., had never heard until yesterday that her son M/Sgt. John P. Porter had been wounded or ill.

"It doesn't matter now that he's coming home," she said.

A German-born New York boy who has no family in America will find just as big a welcome as any when he gets back to the United States. He is Pvt. Carl W. Kirchenhausen, 27-year-old shipping clerk.

"He was a very, very good boy," said Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Nassauer, childless couple with whom Carl lived in a Manhattan apartment. The Nassauers regard him "more or less" as their son and discount a letter they got from him recently praising the Communist regime. Mrs. Nassauer said the Reds must have made him write it and he complied in order to get the letter to them.

Prayers Are Answered

The prayers of Mr. and Mrs. George Morrison were answered when their son, Cpl. Richard P. Morrison, was identified as one of the repatriated prisoners. They had not heard from him since January, 1952. Mrs. Morrison, voted "Mother of the Year" in her home town of Burlington, Iowa, said she was "hoping" her son was all right. "I always held hopes and never did give up," she said.

Mrs. Lulu Stell of Baltimore, greying mother of Robert Chris Stell, 21, said simply:

"I hope he will be home soon."

Members of the Negro soldier's family said they had not heard directly from him since he left Ft. Lewis, Wash., in July, 1950, for Korea. He was reported missing in January, 1951.

Another Negro soldier whose mother said she had been praying daily for his return was Cpl. Vernon L. Warren, among the first 14 to be freed. She is Mrs. Riller Warren of St. Louis, who is going to give her boy the biggest plate of chicken he ever saw when he gets home.

Baby of Family

"He is the baby of the family," said Mrs. Warren of her 21-year-old son. She has six children and the father is dead. Vernon was captured in November, 1950.

A brother and sister of Pfc. David W. Ludlum, Ft. Wayne, Ind., listened to the wrong radio program and missed the announcement of his release.

"We haven't seen him in four years," said the brother, Jackson Ludlum, "but I don't know how we'll wait until he gets home." That went for the sister, Mrs. Ruth Fidler. The Ludlums' parents are dead. David had been a prisoner since May, 1951.

Mrs. Margaret Porter of Fieldsboro, N. J., said she would fly to meet her husband, M/Sgt. John Paul Porter, 11-year army veteran who had been a prisoner since November, 1950. She said she had heard from her husband but it was "strictly a Communist letter."

The parents of M/Sgt. Robert Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Shaw of Liverpool, N. Y. were worried about their son since they had never heard there was anything wrong with him. Shaw's wife, Mrs. Esther Shaw of Vancouver, Wash., said she had "just about given up hope" he would be among the repatriated prisoners when she got the news. Shaw, 44, was taken prisoner Dec. 3, 1950.

Mrs. Lowell Nolan of Rexville, N. Y., ran sobbing into a kitchen, fearing the worst when a neighbor knocked on her door and asked if she had a son in the service. She wept harder, but with tears of joy, when she learned her son, Pfc. Almond Nolan, 23, had been freed.

Seven Reach Russia; Freed by North Korea

Moscow, April 20 (AP) — Six British civilians and an Irish priest—freed by the North Koreans—stepped from the Trans-Siberian Express today to freedom and a warm British welcome.

They were met at Moscow's Yaroslavsky station after the long train trip across Siberia by Britain's ambassador here, Sir Alvary Gascoigne, and others from the British embassy.

A special RAF transport plane is due to fly in here tomorrow to return the group to England.

Allies Glad

Communist camps and the Reds made a bigger effort to indoctrinate the enlisted men.

He said allied enlisted personnel generally received better treatment than captured officers but "it would be hard to say how in a very few minutes."

Jones was captured when his regiment was cut off.

He said the morale of the officers held by the Communists was still quite good.

Saw Russian Civilians

"I saw a certain amount of Russian civilian personnel" in North Korea, he said.

A DDT dusting was one of the first things given the prisoners on their arrival here.

All were dressed in Chinese-type blue padded uniforms with peaked blue hats. They wore black canvas shoes.

On the attempt of the Communists to teach politics in the prison camps, Medina said the Communists had classes for the POWs "almost every day. Lately, they have—you know—lessened down."

Pvt. David Ludlum of Fort Wayne, Ind., said that for three or four months attendance was required at classes in communism.

Outside the tent where the former captives were interviewed there was considerable tension and emotion as the first soldiers arrived by ambulance.

A British prisoner stepping out of an ambulance was so overcome that he threw his arms around an American lieutenant and burst into tears.

Marine Pfc Albert Pizarro, 24, of Rio Beidro, Puerto Rico, was wounded and captured in the Panmunjom sector last Oct. 6.

Pizarro said he was wounded by incoming mortar and artillery on on outpost.

"I take infection in the leg. He gives me three operations," he said.

No Medical Treatment

Sfc. Robert Lee of Columbus, Ga., and Troy, Ala., complained that he received no medical treatment during 29 months imprisonment.

"I've never been so happy to see a bunch of Americans in my life," he declared.

Pinkston said his camp was bombed by allied planes once but no one was hurt.

Pvt. Carl W. Kirchenhausen of New York said a minority of prisoners had been influenced by Red propaganda. He said the camp library was full of Communist literature with "very few novels."

Pfc. Donald Legay of Leominster, Mass., reported there were many sick and wounded still in Red camps. Legay, 23, was captured in 1950 and suffered a wound in his arm. It never completely healed and "drained all the time."

But despite his experience, Legay declared "I'm going to stay right in the service."

Pfc. Almond L. Nolan of Rexville, N. Y., didn't think the treatment was "too bad . . . although the first winter was pretty tough." Nolan was captured in December, 1950.

Of the food, Nolan said, "it wasn't too bad and it wasn't too good."

Gen. Mark Clark, United Nations and U. S. Far East Commander, was in the tent as the interviews began. For once, he was completely ignored by the newsmen. A reporter asked him how he felt about that and he said:

"I'm delighted—It feels good."

Feeling Is Reds

in trucks, Russian jeeps and ambulances. The Reds were moved up from South Korea by train to Munsan and then here in ambulances.

Rear Adm. John C. Daniel, a UN truce delegate, met the allied men.

Each was given a package of cigarettes and a letter from Gen. Mark Clark, UN commander, as they stepped over the line.

Some were bearded; some were clean-shaven. All looked older than their years.

One had a bottle of Chinese beer in his hip pocket. Another had a bottle of wine.

All wore new, blue Chinese uniforms, peaked caps and black tennis shoes the Communists gave them at Kaesong, six miles up the road.

In contrast, some Chinese who went back had soiled and torn their new uniforms given them by the UN.

A large number of the Reds refused breakfast in a haughty manner before they started for the Communist side.

Poughkeepsie Man Is One of 'Copter Crewmen

Munsan, April 20 (AP)—Thirty-three helicopter pilots have been assigned to the evacuation of sick and wounded allied prisoners in the POW exchange beginning today.

Local Youths Cited For Telescope at Oneonta Meeting

A telescope built by three Kingston youths was awarded first prize in the general science competition during the 12th Oneonta Science Conference for elementary and high school pupils.

The local youths who built the telescope are Robert Donnaruma, Joseph Bonacci and Gerald Fisher.

The award to the local youths was one of many announced today by The Oneonta Daily Star, Hartwick College and the Smith-Dewar Foundation at Hartwick, sponsors of the conference.

According to the Associated Press, John Bredesen, 18, of Highland Falls, won a $450 scholarship to Hartwick College by taking first prize in the physics contest.

Bredesen's exhibit on remote house light also was chosen Saturday to represent the conference at the National Science Fair at Oak Ridge, Tenn., next month.

Bredesen was named one of three delegates to the State Science Congress in Troy May 22-23. Others elected were Alice Shaffer of Endicott, winner of the biology division, and Joseph Dolfini of Middletown, the chemistry winner.

Building a radio, the AP reported, won Dillon Maier of Sququoit the motor and radio-building contest sponsored by the Johnson City Westinghouse Electric Company plant.

Ravine Street Man Hurt As Vehicle Strikes Pole

Thomas DeAngelis, 17, of 73 Ravine street, was treated at Kingston Hospital for minor cuts and bruises of the face and head after the car in which he was riding struck a pole early Sunday at Montrepose avenue and West Chestnut street.

Officers James Harbeck and Meyer Levy reported at 2:20 a. m., that the car, driven by William DeAngelis, of the same address, was going west on West Chestnut street and turning left into Montrepose avenue, when it skidded into a pole of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp.

The officers reported the pole, which supported a transformer, was badly shattered. Central Hudson was notified and made temporary repairs. The mishap did not throw out electric service.

Thomas DeAngelis was taken to the hospital in a police patrol car.

Mayor Will Confer Upon Thruway Problem for City

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today he is scheduled to confer with B. D. Tallamy, chairman of the New York State Thruway Authority, at 11 a. m., tomorrow, to emphasize further the city's traffic problem if the Onteora Trail, Route 28, is temporarily connected with the thruway.

The state has given no definite assurance that the express highway will not be temporarily connected with Route 28 when the Kingston-Sawkill strip is finished, despite two requests from the mayor.

May Avoid Interchange

The mayor's letters emphasized the problem of the narrow Washington avenue viaduct and new congestion in cluttered uptown streets, but each reply from the state indicated no abandonment of plans for a temporary interchange a few hundred feet west of the city.

A recent letter from Tallamy's office implied that if congestion developes, the public would avoid the interchange. It mentioned no contemplated action to abandon present plans, and said highway officials felt from past experiences, that public pressure favors the opening of any newly completed strip of highway.

The mayor proposed that truck traffic enter and leave the thruway at Saugerties as at present, and that passenger cars continue to enter and leave at Lake Katrine until the strip between Kingston and Whiteport is ready for traffic.

The recent state letter indicated that the interval between completion of the two strips would not be long, but did not say how long it would be.

Joy Is Note

who had been listed as killed in action, was among the returnees at Freedom Village. Only two days ago she had received a letter from him, however, assuring her he was well and healthy.

"I'm happy, how would you feel?" said Mrs. Lawley.

The name of Lt. Roy M. Jones was the magic word that brought a smile through the tears of his mother, Mrs. Roy P. Jones of Minneapolis. Jones was presumed dead by the War Department for more than a year when five soldiers reported they saw him bleeding to death from machine gun wounds. He was captured in November, 1950. Mrs. Jones, ill for several years, at one time weighed only 80 pounds. The father said they had not expected their son to be repatriated since he had written he had recovered completely.

Mrs. Sally Blue of Highland Park, Mich., listened for hours last night, hoping to hear her son, Pvt. Jesse Robertson, 18, had been freed. Finally she went to bed—and newsmen awakened her to tell her she hadn't listened long enough. Jesse, who had been missing since last November, soon would be coming home.

'Sure Am Happy'

"Lord, Lord, I sure am happy," was the robust comment of Mrs. William Brock of Rome, Ga., when she heard her son, Pvt. William R. Brock Jr., was coming home from the Reds' prisoner of war camp. "I reckon I was just about to worry myself crazy about my boy. He's been a prisoner since November, 1951."

Mrs. Annie Porter Thomas of Oakdale, La., had never heard until yesterday that her son M/Sgt. John P. Porter had been wounded or ill.

"It doesn't matter now that he's coming home," she said.

A German-born New York boy who has no family in America will find just as big a welcome as any when he gets back to the United States. He is Pvt. Carl W. Kirchenhausen, 27-year-old shipping clerk.

"He was a very, very good boy," said Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Nassauer, childless couple with whom Carl lived in a Manhattan apartment. The Nassauers regard him "more or less" as their son and discount a letter they got from him recently praising the Communist regime. Mrs. Nassauer said the Reds must have made him write it and he complied in order to get the letter to them.

Prayers Are Answered

The prayers of Mr. and Mrs. George Morrison were answered when their son, Cpl. Richard P. Morrison, was identified as one of the repatriated prisoners. They had not heard from him since January, 1952. Mrs. Morrison, voted "Mother of the Year" in her home town of Burlington, Iowa, said she was "hoping" her son was all right. "I always held hopes and never did give up," she said.

Mrs. Lulu Stell of Baltimore, greying mother of Robert Chris Stell, 21, said simply:

"I hope he will be home soon."

Members of the Negro soldier's family said they had not heard directly from him since he left Ft. Lewis, Wash., in July, 1950, for Korea. He was reported missing in January, 1951.

Another Negro soldier whose mother said she had been praying daily for his return was Cpl. Vernon L. Warren, among the first 14 to be freed. She is Mrs. Riller Warren of St. Louis, who is going to give her boy the biggest plate of chicken he ever saw when he gets home.

Baby of Family

"He is the baby of the family," said Mrs. Warren of her 21-year-old son. She has six children and the father is dead. Vernon was captured in November, 1950.

A brother and sister of Pfc. David W. Ludlum, Ft. Wayne, Ind., listened to the wrong radio program and missed the announcement of his release.

"We haven't seen him in four years," said the brother, Jackson Ludlum, "but I don't know how we'll wait until he gets home." That went for the sister, Mrs. Ruth Fidler. The Ludlums' parents are dead. David had been a prisoner since May, 1951.

Mrs. Margaret Porter of Fieldsboro, N. J., said she would fly to meet her husband, M/Sgt. John Paul Porter, 11-year army veteran who had been a prisoner since November, 1950. She said she had heard from her husband but it was "strictly a Communist letter."

The parents of M/Sgt. Robert Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Shaw of Liverpool, N. Y. were worried about their son since they had never heard there was anything wrong with him. Shaw's wife, Mrs. Esther Shaw of Vancouver, Wash., said she had "just about given up hope" he would be among the repatriated prisoners when she got the news. Shaw, 44, was taken prisoner Dec. 3, 1950.

Mrs. Lowell Nolan of Rexville, N. Y., ran sobbing into a kitchen, fearing the worst when a neighbor knocked on her door and asked if she had a son in the service. She wept harder, but with tears of joy, when she learned her son, Pfc. Almond Nolan, 23, had been freed.

Allies Glad

Communist camps and the Reds made a bigger effort to indoctrinate the enlisted men.

He said allied enlisted personnel generally received better treatment than captured officers but "it would be hard to say how in a very few minutes."

Jones was captured when his regiment was cut off.

He said the morale of the officers held by the Communists was still quite good.

Saw Russian Civilians

"I saw a certain amount of Russian civilian personnel" in North Korea, he said.

A DDT dusting was one of the first things given the prisoners on their arrival here.

All were dressed in Chinese-type blue padded uniforms with peaked blue hats. They wore black canvas shoes.

On the attempt of the Communists to teach politics in the prison camps, Medina said the Communists had classes for the POWs "almost every day. Lately, they have—you know—lessened down."

Pvt. David Ludlum of Fort Wayne, Ind., said that for three or four months attendance was required at classes in communism.

Outside the tent where the former captives were interviewed, there was considerable tension and emotion as the first soldiers arrived by ambulance.

A British prisoner stepping out of an ambulance was so overcome that he threw his arms around an American lieutenant and burst into tears.

Marine Pfc Albert Pizarro, 24, of Rio Beidro, Puerto Rico, was wounded and captured in the Panmunjom sector last Oct. 6.

Pizarro said he was wounded by incoming mortar and artillery on on outpost.

"I take infection in the leg. He gives me three operations," he said.

No Medical Treatment

Sfc. Robert Lee of Columbus, Ga., and Troy, Ala., complained that he received no medical treatment during 29 months imprisonment.

"I've never been so happy to see a bunch of Americans in my life," he declared.

Pinkston said his camp was bombed by allied planes once but no one was hurt.

Pvt. Carl W. Kirchenhausen of New York said a minority of prisoners had been influenced by Red propaganda. He said the camp library was full of Communist literature with "very few novels."

Pfc. Donald Legay of Leominster, Mass., reported there were many sick and wounded still in Red camps. Legay, 23, was captured in 1950 and suffered a wound in his arm. It never completely healed and "drained all the time."

But despite his experience, Legay declared "I'm going to stay right in the service."

Pfc. Almond L. Nolan of Rexville, N. Y., didn't think the treatment was "too bad * * * although the first winter was pretty rough." Nolan was captured in December, 1950.

Of the food, Nolan said, "it wasn't too bad and it wasn't too good."

Gen. Mark Clark, United Nations and U. S. Far East Commander, was in the tent as the interviews began. For once, he was completely ignored by the newsmen. A reporter asked him how he felt about that and he said:

"I'm delighted—It feels good."

Seven Reach Russia; Freed by North Korea

Moscow, April 20 (AP) — Six British civilians and an Irish priest—freed by the North Koreans—stepped from the Trans-Siberian Express today to freedom and a warm British welcome.

They were met at Moscow's Yaroslavsky station after the long train trip across Siberia by Britain's ambassador here, Sir Alvary Gascoigne, and others from the British embassy.

A special RAF transport plane is due to fly in here tomorrow to return the group to England.

Feeling Is Reds

in trucks, Russian jeeps and ambulances. The Reds were moved up from South Korea by train to Munsan and then here in ambulances.

Rear Adm. John C. Daniel, a UN truce delegate, met the allied men.

Each was given a package of cigarettes and a letter from Gen. Mark Clark, UN commander, as they stepped over the line.

Some were bearded; some were clean-shaven. All looked older than their years.

One had a bottle of Chinese beer in his hip pocket. Another had a bottle of wine.

All wore new, blue Chinese uniforms, peaked caps and black tennis shoes the Communists gave them at Kaesong, six miles up the road.

In contrast, some Chinese who went back had soiled and torn their new uniforms given them by the UN.

A large number of the Reds refused breakfast in a haughty manner before they started for the Communist side.

State Maple Products Week April 19-25

In honor of the state's maple industry which is exceeded in volume by only one other state, Governor Thomas E. Dewey signs a proclamation designating the week of April 19-25 as "New York Maple Products Week." Looking on are left to right, Mrs. Barbara Craig, Jefferson, central New York's "Maple Queen"; Charles Hubbell, Jefferson, president of the Central New York Maple Producers Association; Jack Ruderman, president of the Gouverneur Chamber of Commerce and Miss Penelope Jane Case of Gouverneur, northern New York's "Maple Queen."

Appliance Bill Killed by Dewey, Cites Penal Law

Albany, April 20 (AP)—Legislation aimed at merchants who bootleg appliances has been killed by Gov. Dewey at the request of a New York city lawyer's association.

The Governor vetoed a bill yesterday that would have made it a misdemeanor for a dealer or merchant, or their employes, to possess for sale, or sell, any appliance on which the manufacturer's serial number or trade mark had been removed, obliterated or covered.

The measure, introduced by Republican Assemblyman Malcolm Wilson of Yonkers, would not have covered used merchandise.

Dewey said in a memorandum that the penal law already made it a misdemeanor for a dealer to remove, alter or destroy such serial numbers of identification marks "for the purpose of defrauding any purchaser."

The Association of the Bar of the City of New York the governor the legislative intent of the present law was to "punish those who tamper with serial numbers 'for the purpose of preventing the detection of a crime or defrauding the manufacturer or purchaser of such machine."

The group said the Wilson bill "appears to depart from this purpose and standard, by eliminating the element of intent, and making the offense described a police regulatory one."

The measure had been endorsed by the Better Business Bureaus of New York city, Buffalo and Utica and by many distributors of electrical products.

Dynamite Under Church

Richfield, Utah (AP)—Enough dynamite to blow a church to kingdom come was found recently under a chapel. The custodian discovered 48 sticks of dynamite and 22 detonating caps near the boiler room of the chapel of the (Latter-Day Saints) Mormon Church. The explosives had become moldy, and a bishop recalled that dynamite had been used to blast a hole in the cellar 30 years ago. It was thought a worker forgot to remove the unused explosives.

VASSAR COLLEGE

when horsepower was mostly "on the hoof"

Even a bicycle was a rare sight on the campus at Vassar toward the end of the last century, when people traveled slowly about Poughkeepsie behind horses or afoot. America was just beginning to learn how to harness horsepower.

It was back in those days that Sedgwick Machine Works made a modest start in Poughkeepsie. In 1893, Alonzo Sedgwick, with little more than a new idea and a few dollars, started a manufacturing business that was destined to keep pace with the expanding American economy and machine-age living by supplying modern, vertical transportation equipment for greater convenience, comfort and efficiency.

There are still men in the Sedgwick organization who well remember the early pre-machine-age days when Sedgwick was mainly producing hand-operated dumb waiters, and the prim and proper young ladies at Vassar got a real thrill out of a carriage ride behind a spanking team of well-matched horses. Sedgwick oldtimers, helping today to produce the smooth-running dumb waiters, Residence Elevators, Stair-Travelors and other motorized Sedgwick equipment, appreciate the great changes that have taken place.

There is one thing, however, that has never changed at Sedgwick. That is the friendly spirit of close cooperation between labor and management. Here a man's efforts are seen and appreciated—he works closer to management than he would under the impersonal, straight-line production system.

Here men build an interesting variety of products, too. They learn to work with metal and wood and have many opportunities to use different tools and machines. This all-around ability which Sedgwick workers acquire is like money in the bank. It's a real asset in an industrial country like ours where many skills are needed.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E THIBAUT, Jr.

German Consul Visits in Village

Woodstock, April 18—Gesandschaftersrat A. Schlegl, who has been the vice consul to the Consul General of the Federal Republic of Germany for the past two years, was the weekend guest recently of his cousin, Mrs. Clara Rohde, of Maplebrook House Willow. Schlegl granted an exclusive interview to this correspondent during his stay here.

"Since the occupation of Germany," Schlegl said, "the Republic does not have a diplomatic embassy in this country. In its place is the German diplomatic mission in Washington, the office to which Schlegl is attached.

The past two weeks have probably been the busiest in the career of Schlegl since his arrival here in 1950 on his first diplomatic mission. His duties have included making the arrangements for programs and schedules in conjunction with the visit in New York of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Schlegl returned to New York early in the week to plan for the luncheon and reception which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Thursday for the Chancellor to meet 800 honored guests. Dr. Adenauer, first German chancellor ever to visit this country, gave an address to the members of the American Committee on United Europe.

Drafted by Nazis

According to Schlegl, diplomatic protocol directed that he introduce the guests to the Counsul General of Germany, who in turn would introduce them to Dr. Adenaur. The Consul General is Dr. Hans E. Rieser, who is permanent German observer at the UN.

Schlegl, whose education at the Law School of the University of Munich was interrupted by the outbreak of World War 2, was drafted into the Nazi army as an interpreter. At the close of the war he returned to the university and completed his law course. He then entered the diplomatic service and was admitted to the Foreign Office. In 1950 he began this, his first diplomatic mission, which when it is concluded, he will return to the Foreign Office in Germany.

Since his arrival here, this has been Schlegl's second visit to Woodstock. He remarked that the Catskill Mountains reminded him of the mountains of Bavaria, and in the comparison was enthusiastic about the beauty of this country.

During each year of service here, Schlegl is granted a month's vacation, during which he has traveled extensively in the United States and has made a visit to see an uncle in Brazil.

Agapaes Celebrate 30th Anniversary

Woodstock, April 17—The regular meeting of Agapae Rebekah Lodge was held at the Bearsville Lodge Hall Wednesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Longo, Karl E. Cousins and H. Preventing Tuberculosis

Tuberculosis and automobile accidents may seem to have little in common, but they are alike in that both can be prevented. Both rank tragically high among causes of death in this country. In 1950, highway accidents caused 33,577 deaths, and tuberculosis 33,633. Gross death rates from both causes were thus identical, 22 per 100,000.

Most of us are familiar at first hand with the perils of the highway. Almost daily we see newspaper accounts of spectacular motor accidents. We are all aware of the need for preventive measures.

Although tuberculosis is less spectacular and less publicized, we must not forget that it can be just as deadly as a car out of control. And just as unnecessary. Knowledge of the facts about the disease is the first preventive weapon.

Tuberculosis is a chronic, communicable disease caused by a germ called the tubercle bacillus, which is spread from person to person. It is not inherited, any more than is careless driving. It does not attack just the young and frail. Anybody can catch TB, rich or poor, young or old.

The "rules of the road" to prevent tuberculosis requires: a balanced, nourishing diet; plenty of sleep; moderate outdoor recreation; clothing suited to the weather to prevent colds; avoiding people who do not cover coughs and sneezes, and having a regular medical examination with a chest X-ray at least once a year.

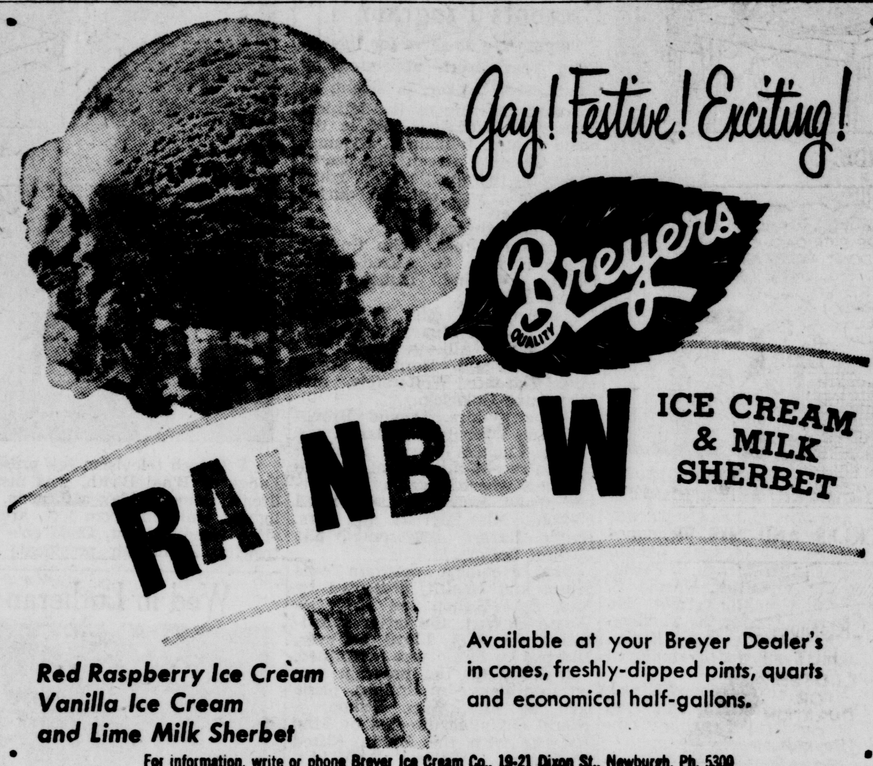

Tuberculosis seldom shows any outward symptoms in the early stages, but the X-ray can detect it. The sooner TB is discovered, the better are the chances for quick recovery, and the smaller are the chances for the germs to find new victims.

Know When to Add Cards

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

There seems to be some confusion about the right of a player to add cards to a canasta. There is not and never has been any rule that limits a canasta to exactly seven cards. You need at least seven cards in a meld to make a canasta, but you are allowed to use more than seven cards.

Let's take a few examples to answer some of the questions that people ask about this point. You make a meld of seven kings and close your canasta. Later on, you get the eighth king and want to add it to the canasta. That is perfectly legal and proper. Go ahead and add the king.

Could you add a wild card to the closed canasta? Yes. That would change it to a mixed canasta, of course, and would entitle you to a bonus of only 300 points instead of the 500 points for a natural canasta. Nevertheless, if you had some reason for wanting to do so (such as wanting to meld) you would be within your rights in adding a wild card to the canasta.

Let's alter the canasta a trifle. Suppose that your canasta consists of five kings and two wild cards. Now what can you add to it? You can always add natural kings to it. There is no restriction on adding natural cards to a canasta (except that there are only eight kings in the deck).

What about adding wild cards? You may add a wild card in this case, since then the canasta will include only three wild cards. You are always allowed to add one or more wild cards to a canasta provided that you don't thereby exceed the legal limit of three wild cards.

Let's take a slightly different case. You have a meld that consists of four kings and one wild card. You have two kings in your hand, with the discard pile frozen. The player at your right discards a king. What are your rights?

You may put down your two kings, add the king from the discard pile, and take the whole pile. This gives you a canasta of eight cards, which is perfectly all right. Don't give it a second thought.

What should you do if the players in your game insist that a canasta may never include more than seven cards? Try to talk them out of it. Save this clipping to help you. If you can't talk them out of it, give up gracefully and play the game their way.

Mr. Jacoby is unable to answer individual questions on Canasta from readers. However, he will include the most frequently asked questions in his column.

German Consul Visits in Village

Woodstock, April 18—Gesandschaftersrat A. Schlegl, who has been the vice consul to the Consul General of the Federal Republic of Germany for the past two years, was the weekend guest recently of his cousin, Mrs. Clara Rohde, of Maplebrook House Willow. Schlegl granted an exclusive interview to this correspondent during his stay here.

"Since the occupation of Germany," Schlegl said, "the Republic does not have a royal embassy in this country. In its place is the German diplomatic mission in Washington, the office to which Schlegl is attached.

The past two weeks have probably been the busiest in the career of Schlegl since his arrival here in 1950 on his first diplomatic mission. His duties have included making the arrangements for programs and schedules in conjunction with the visit in New York of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, of the Federal Republic of Germany.

Schlegl returned to New York early in the week to plan for the luncheon and reception which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria Thursday for the Chancellor to meet 800 honored guests. Dr. Adenauer, first German chancellor ever to visit this country, gave an address to the members of the American Committee on United Europe.

Drafted by Nazis

According to Schlegl, diplomatic protocol directed that he introduce the guests to the Counsul General of Germany, who in turn would introduce them to Dr. Adenaur. The Consul General is Dr. Has E. Rieser, who is permanent German observer at the UN.

Schlegl, whose education at the Law Shool of the University of Munich was interrupted by the outbreak of Wold War 2, was drafted into the Nazi army as an interpreter. At the close of the war he returned to the university and completed his law course. He then entered the diplomatic service an was admitted to the Foreign Office. In 1950 he began this, his first diplomatic mission, which when it is concluded, he will return to the Foreign Office in Germany.

Since his arrival here, this has been Schlegl's second visit to Woodstock. He remarked that the Catskill Mountains reminded him of the mountains of Bavaria, and in the comparison was enthusiastic about the beauty of this country.

During each year of service here, Schlegl has been granted a month's vacation, during which he has traveled extensively in the United States and has made a visit to see an uncle in Brazil.

DINNER TABLE PROBLEM

A most unpleasant situation is described as follows: "The other day while dining at a friend's house, I noticed a hair on the butter in my butter dish. It so happens we had baked potatoes for lunch on which I would have loved some butter, but as I did not want to embarrass either my hostess or the waitress, I said nothing and just didn't use it. However, I would like to know if, in a situation of this kind, it would have been proper to ask the waitress to bring other butter, or whether I should have said something to my hostess about it, or was it best manners to say nothing."

If you could have controlled your repugnance sufficiently and it was possible to have cut an untouched portion of the butter away from the offending portion, this was what you should have done. Your only other choice was to do what you did and eat your potato without butter.

A Hospitable Gesture Never Wrong

Dear Mrs. Post: One of the men with whom my husband works stopped at our house last Sunday afternoon to see my husband about a business matter. His wife waited out in the car for him. Do you think I was rude in not asking her to come in?

Answer: If your husband's visitor stayed for more than a very few minutes, it would have been more courteous had you gone out to their car and invited her to come in.

Proper Dress for Choir Concert

Dear Mrs. Post: Our choir is giving a concert next month on a Sunday afternoon at our local town hall. The program will begin at four-thirty. We are undecided as to what to wear. Would evening dresses be correct for the women and tuxedos for the men?

Answer: In the first place, evening clothes are not correct before six o'clock, and in the second, Sunday is not the day on which to emphasize evening dress. The women should wear afternoon dresses and the men dark blue suits.

Syracuse, April 20 (AP)—Bob Curran, a 21-year-old junior from Jackson Heights, last night was elected captain of Syracuse University's 1953-54 swimming team.

Miron Captain Heads 16-Team Valley League

Annual Banquet Held Saturday

Charles Manfro, captain of the championship Miron Lumber squad, was elected president of the Hudson Valley Bowling League for the 1953-54 season at the annual dinner meeting Saturday at the Flamingo Restaurant.

Manfro succeeds Charles J. Riccardi, of Saugerties.

Bert Rhea, of Poughkeepsie, wer re-elected secretary-treasurer and Frank Finn of Liberty was named vice-president.

More than 100 persons attended the annual banquet at which prize awards were made for the season just ended.

Prizes Awarded

Miron Lumber received cash awards of $199 for the team title with 66 wins and 24 losses, a six-game margin over the runnerup Veteran Cabs of Poughkeepsie.

The Lumberjacks also picked up an additional $25 for high team series of 3253 and $15 for high team single of 1171. John Ferraro was awarded $25 for high single of 298 and 818 triple.

Ferraro's 201-63 average was worth $25. Other individual average awards went to Phil Versace of Poughkeepsie, Wally Gerken of Newburgh and Frank Greco of Ellenville.

Bert Rhea presented Manfro with the sponsor's trophy. Ferraro received an electric clock with a bowling figurine as the American Bowling Congress award for his 298 solo. His 818 series, fourth highest in the nation at the moment, earned him membership in the exclusive Society De 800.

Speakers included retiring president, Charles J. Riccardi, who welcomed the gathering; Bert Rhea, Charles Manfro and Charles J. Tiano, Freeman sports editor, who was the toastmaster.

Also introduced were Addison Jones of Kingston, founder of the Hudson Valley League, and Mrs. Bert Rhea, the distaff side of Poughkepsie's well known Ma and Pa radio bowling team.

At its business meeting, the league directors voted to retain the Saturday night schedule introduced last season. There was also some lively discussion on possible changes in the postponement rule for next season.

Ford Bags First Tournament Win

Virginia Beach, Va., April 20 (AP)—Doug Ford of Harrison, N. Y., has abandoned his role as professional golf's hard luck guy.

He shed the cloak of ill fortune yesterday when he won the $12,500 Virginia Beach Open with rounds of 63-65-67-67 for a 72-hole total of 262. Four other times this year, Ford had victory practically in the palm of his hand but lost every time.

Ford gives all of the credit for breaking the monotony of playing second fiddle to his father, Mike Broda, a Yonkers, N. Y., professional for many years.

"My father taught me all I know about golf," 30-year-old Doug said as he picked up his $2,000 check. "All the credit goes to him. He's the only person I've every really listened to about golf."

Ford has won only one other championship, the 1952 Jacksonville Open, since joining the big-time golf trail in 1949.

Ford almost missed out on this title. When he started out over the par 69 Cavalier Yacht and Country Club course in yesterday's fourth round, he was worried about three foes—Dick Metz of Maple City, Kan., Francis (Bo) Wininger of Oklahoma City and Jimmy Demaret of Kiamesha Lake, N. Y.

Metz was three strokes behind Ford, Wininger four, and Demaret five.

None was equal to the task of overhauling Ford. But a 30-year-old, comparatively unknown pro named Ansel Snow wiped out the seven strokes that separated him from Ford, only to fade under the pressure on the last three holes.

Bratton Declares $10,000 To Gavilan Was No Fluke

Two of the outstanding "name" boxers of the day, former world's welterweight champion Johnny Bratton and heavyweight contender, Clarence Henry, were weekend gusets at Richards Farms, River Road, Port Ewen. The group assembled Saturday at the Farms, included, l to r: Robert Richards, Johnny Bratton, Fred Davi, who will promote a boxing show in the near future; George Stevens, assistant trainer; Jimmy Asendio, trainer who once handled Henry Armstrong and Clarence Henry, heavyweight contender. Freeman photo)

Johnny Bratton, former world's welterweight champion, wasn't kidding when he offered to post a $10,000 check with the Damon Runyan Cancer Fund, if Kid Gavilan, the current titleholder, would give him a shot at the title.

Bratton, who, with heavyweight Clarence Henry, was a weekend guest at the Robert Richards estate high above the River Road below Port Ewen, was a deadly serious young man when interviewed on Saturday.

"That offer still stands," said the lithe, powerfully-built, good looking young man, who relinquished his title to the Cuban Keed on May 18, 1951, in a 15-round bout at New York.

"A lot of folks thought that was a big publicity stunt," Bratton went on, "but we're ready to post that check any time Gavilan decides to sign for a return."

Bratton, who has flashed sensational form in two recent bouts, said he expected to return to action in about a month. But the Gavilan bout is his big goal.

Praises Champion

"There is no question that Gavilan is a great fighter," Bratton said, "but I feel he owes me a return bout and he can't duck the issue much longer. He's great, but not invincible, as that bout with Livio Minelli proved the other night."

Jimmy Asendio, who trained Hurricane Henry Armstrong when the fabulous Negro boxer held three world's titles simultaneously, nodded in assent.

"Gavilan can't duck Johnny forever. If he does, he cheapens the welterweight title and the public will demand a championship match between the two. I think it woud make a great outdoor attraction this summer."

Clarence Henry, who holds a knockout over Bob Satterfield and has whipped four of the current contenders who are "rated" above him, says he expects to meet a "name" heavyweight within the next month or so.

Spent Weekend Here

Bratton and Henry and their wives were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Richards at their beautiful estate high on a bluff overlooking the Hudson' river.

Richards, a New York business man, has only a rooting interest in boxing, but plans to set up training quarters for Bratton and Henry on his estate this summer.

The two name fighters will start training at the Richards Farms as soon as weather permits outdoor action. Other prominent Negro boxers are expected to train there.

Also in entourage' is George Stevens, a former boxer, who will assist Asendio in training Bratton and Henry.

The prominent boxers spent a busy weekend in Kingston despite the miserable weather of the weekend. Saturday afternoon they met with Fred Davi, who plans to promote an amateur boxing card in Kingston on May 9, and the two recently crowned novice champions of the Adirondack AAU—Eddie Kitchcart and Phil Gatti, of the Glasco Athletic Club boxing squad.

Bratton also made a radio appearance and visited the Wiltwyck School at Esopus and the Kingston Boys Club. He was scheduled to return to New York today and will return at a later date to start workouts.

KPBA Sets July 5th Date For 12th Annual Regatta

Record Entry Is Predicted

The Kingston Power Boat Association's 12th annual outboard regatta will be held on Sunday, July 5, KPBA public relations director, Vernon Radel, said today.

Coming at the end of a traditionally busy holiday weekend for the pilots, the Kingston regatta is expected to attract a record breaking field.

The American Power Boat Association, the governing body of outboard racing in the United States, has amended its rules to permit stock hydroplanes to compete with racing outfits in the same class.

The new rule, Radel points out, should swell the number of entries in each event and will no doubt attract drivers from the Hudson valley area who have never competed on the Rondout.

May Alter Course

Alterations of the present course are also expected to boost spectator interest.

If proposed changes meet with the approval of the organizations that handle the officiating at the regatta, the course will be altered this year to afford the spectators the utmost opportunity to see the entire race.

This can be accomplished, the KPBA believes, by revising the present layout, shortening the straightaways and running the races in four laps instead of the traditional three. These changes would keep the entire action directly in front of the spectators at all times.

Bruck Is Chairman

Neil Bruck again heads the Regatta Committee as chairman and his group is busy soliciting the support of merchants and interested individuals for this popular mid-summer feature.

Eleven races are carded this year and each will be sponsored by some local organization or individual. Another highlight of the regatta will be awarding of a 14-foot Thompson outboard runabout and flock of other prizes to patrons of the race.

The idea to have local concerns sponsor races was initiated in 1952 and met with the enthusiastic response. As a matter of fact there were more sponsors than races.

Entries already are pouring into KPBA headquarters, Radel said.

Etchison In Main Go

Two of television's newest sensations — Ronnie Etchison and Sonny Meyers—are scheduled to clash in the feature bout on tonight's card at the municipal auditorium.

First bout is at 8:45 p. m.

Promoter Ted Bayly has imported several new faces to back up the feature clash between the Chicago TV stars.

Frank Taylor of Toronto meets Pedro Godoy, the South American villain, in a best-of-three semi-final bout.

The opener brings together Al Getz of St. Louis and Bob Leipler of Buffalo.

Panter in Debut

New York, April 20 (AP)—Garth Panter, Salt Lake City middleweight, makes his eastern debut tonight against stocky Tuzo (Kid) Portuguez of Costa Rica in the feature ten rounder at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena. Pantner is a 2 to 1 choice to make good. The 10 p. m. EST, scrap will be telecast by Dumont.

Track

Newark, N. J. — Manhattan's three-year unbeaten sprint relay mark was snapped by Morgan State when Olympic 100-meter champion Lindy Remigino sustained an injury in the seventh annual Seton Hall relays.

Carter 13-10 Over Collins

New York, April 20 (AP) — Tommy Collins, the hottest attraction in the lightweight division, takes aim at the title Friday night when he faces Champion Jimmy Carter in a 15-rounder at the Boston Garden.

Carter, a journeyman fighter with a strong chin, is a 13 to 10 favorite to whip the 23-year-old Boston Irishman with the choir boy face and the power-packed fists.

Although he hasn't won in his last three outings, the 29-year-old New York Negro has been made the choice because of Collins' china chin. The Boston golden boy generally knocks out his opponents or gets kayoed himself.

The 10 p. m. EST, bout will be broadcast (ABC) and telecast (NBC).

Manhattan, Kas.—Bobby Reynolds, 1950 All-America football player at Nebraska, suffered a broken leg in baseball game with Kansas State.

Little League Registration, Tryouts Will Resume Today

Registration and tryouts for Little League baseball candidates continue at 5:30 p. m. today at the 156th FA stadium and the diamond at upper Hasbrouck Park.

All candidates, age 8 through 12, are requested to attend the tryouts scheduled today, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

The 156th FA stadium will be the scene of the American League trials (the holdover league). The newly organized National League will assemble at Hasbrouck Park.

The city's small fry were out in large numbers in spite of the rainy weather Saturday morning. However the Little League Association is anxious to reach every eligible boy in the city and has extended the tryouts and registration beyond the normal period.

League Director John Hasbrouck is anxious to have all candidates familiarize themselves with the boundaries for the two leagues.

All players with a residence south of any of these designated will be eligible for the National League:

It was decided to maintain the present policy of conducting the annual city tournament on the second and third weekends in February.

Prior to the official business, Treasurer Jack Blinder, a member of the prize committee of the 1953 city tournament, presented trophy and ABC patch awards to the various net winners.

KPBA Sets July 5th Date For 12th Annual Regatta

Record Entry Is Predicted

The Kingston Power Boat Association's 12th annual outboard regatta will be held on Sunday, July 5, KPBA public relations director, Vernon Radel, said today.

Coming at the end of a traditionally busy holiday weekend for the pilots, the Kingston regatta is expected to attract a record breaking field.

Panter in Debut

New York, April 20 (AP)—Garth Panter, Salt Lake City middleweight, makes his eastern debut tonight against stocky Tuzo (Kid) Portuguez of Costa Rica in the feature ten rounder at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena. Pantner is a 2 to 1 choice to make good. The 10 p. m. EST, scrap will be telecast by Dumont.

Track

Newark, N. J. — Manhattan's three-year unbeaten sprint relay mark was snapped by Morgan State when Olympic 100-meter champion Lindy Remigino sustained an injury in the seventh annual Seton Hall relays.

Carter 13-10 Over Collins

New York, April 20 (AP) — Tommy Collins, the hottest attraction in the lightweight division, takes aim at the title Friday night when he faces Champion Jimmy Carter in a 15-rounder at the Boston Garden.

Carter, a journeyman fighter with a strong chin, is a 13 to 10 favorite to whip the 23-year-old Boston Irishman with the choir boy face and the power-packed fists.

Although he hasn't won in his last three outings, the 29-year-old New York Negro has been made the choice because of Collins' china chin. The Boston golden boy generally knocks out his opponents or gets kayoed himself.

The 10 p. m. EST, bout will be broadcast (ABC) and telecast (NBC).

Manhattan, Kas.—Bobby Reynolds, 1950 All-America football player at Nebraska, suffered a broken leg in baseball game with Kansas State.

SPORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

Mickey Mantle's Homeric smash at Griffith Stadium—565 feet Red Patterson said—sent the sports historians scurrying to the archives. And aroused some musty memories in this guy's mind.

Mantle's incredible blast pressed the immortal Babe Ruth for distance honors, but we were thinking of three former greats of the local baseball scene.

James "Babe" Volker, Big Ted Freligh of Saugerties, and the late "Had" Bassett of Kingston, could probably hit a ball as far as any man who ever lived. That sounds like a large order but, if you ever had the pleasure of watching this trio of mastadons propel a horsehide, you know the statement isn't a silly exaggeration.

Volker was the Olympian of the trio. Better known as a pitcher with such hallowed names as the East Kingston Studebakers, the Knights of Columbus, Kingston Colonials and Kingston All Stars, he could, on occasion, drive a baseball for terrifying distance.

• There Was One at Saugerties

Big Jim hit two of the longest shots we ever saw outside the major leagues. Both must have traveled more than 500 feet toward space. One was a titanic blast at Saugerties on the old diamond and was last seen soaring over the road leading into the stadium in deepest left field. The other clout was a majestic effort that sailed out of the Millbrook baseball park and wound up somewhere in northern Dutchess county.

Freligh and Bassett could hit for distances beyond the range of ordinary mortals. We once saw Big Had rifle a shot over the railroad tracks at the old Pan Am field. On another occasion he powered a rocket at Flatbush that appeared to cover several acres of good farm soil below that Flatbush school. We remember that one, we pitched it to him.

The Mantles, the Ruths, Foxxes supermen all. But Messrs. Volker-Freligh-Bassett were no bushers in that department.

• Flotsam and Jetsam:

Sonnie Meyers, who tangles with Ronnie Etchison here tonight, drew a $2500 gate with Irish Pat O'Connor last week at Rome. Former Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman has been named honorary commodore of the Kingston Power Boat Association for 1953. With the designation goes the honorary chairmanship of this year's regatta on July 5. Jack Feye, the deep sea fishing expert, and Richard Meyer, two staunch supporters of the regatta since its inception, will assist Chairman Neil Bruck. Connie Mack has revised his all-time baseball team and now lists the following: First base, George Sisler; second base, Eddie Collins; third base, Harold "Pie" Traynor; shortstop, Hans Wagner. He still goes with the outfield of Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Babe Ruth. His pitchers are Walter Johnson and Christy Mathewson, with Mickey Cochrane and Bill Dickey as the catchers. Middletown, the least professional sports-minded town in the area, is doing a terrific job with junior baseball. A 9-team league has been organized for 1953 with the age limit set at 18 years. Each team is permitted five holdovers from the previous season.

KWBA holds its annual meeting on Monday, May 18, at the YWCA and, besides the election of officers, will ballot on a proposal to stage the annual association tournament the last week in November or the first in December. Using the previous year-end's averages. The women put on the feed bag on Saturday, June 6, at a place to be announced. The state women's association has requested all member city groups to appoint a junior bowling chairman for their own association. The purpose is to further the American Junior Bowling Congress, a youth sports movement that was established long before the Little League in baseball. Its founder, Milton Raymer, is secretary of the AJBC, and will address the state association meeting in May. The AJBC program should be set up in Kingston for the 1953-54 season as a joint responsibility of the KWBA and the KBA. There is also considerable merit to a movement to organize a Hudson Valley Bowling Council made up of member associations of men and women bowlers in the district.

Maybe Izaak Walton was right when he observed: "For angling may be said to be so like mathematics, that it can never be fully learned; at least not so fully but that there will still be more new experiments left for the trial of other men that succeed us."

Southpaw Blanks Yanks 2nd Time

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The 1953 major league baseball season is going to be full of surprises, if the first week is any criterion.

Just look what happened yesterday, the first Sunday of the campaign and only the seventh playing day:

1. Alex Kellner, who dropped six of seven decisions to the New York Yankees last year, shut out the world champions for the second time within six days. The tall Philadelphia Athletics' lefthander became the first pitcher in 19 years to blank the Yanks twice in a row, two-hitting them, 3-0, in the second game of yesterday's doubleheader. He turned them back, 5-0, on five hits, opening day.

2. Bobby Shantz, who didn't lose two in a row last year until early in September, dropped his second straight start when the Yanks defeated him, 5-2, in the first game. The little Philadelphia southpaw has blown two in a row to the champs this season. The Yankees beat him 4-1, last Wednesday.

Browns Sizzling

3. The St. Louis Browns, generally picked to finish deep in the second division, are leading the American League with five triumphs in six games. An 11-inning, 6-3 triumph over the Tigers yesterday gave the Browns a sweep of the three-game series in Detroit and extended their winning streak to four.

4. Walter Masterson, discarded by the Red Sox last summer, turned on his former mates with a five-hitter, fanning nine, as he pitched the Washington Senators to a 4-0 triumph over Boston.

5. Although they accumulated only nine hits off five Pittsburgh pitchers, the Brooklyn Dodgers were recipients of 14 bases on balls and stole four bases to overwhelm the Pirates, 12-4. The result boosted the Dodgers' first place lead in the National League to one full game over St. Louis and dropped the Pirates into the cellar with four defeats in five starts.

Dodgers Stroll

6. The Cardinals scored two runs on two Milwaukee double plays, enough to give them a 4-3 victory over the Braves in a game that was halted in the first inning because of a snow-flurry. A blinding snow, incidentally, halted the Dodger-Pirate game in Pittsburgh for 37 minutes.

Snow, rain and cold weather forced postponements of scheduled doubleheaders between Cleveland and the White Sox in Chicago, and Chicago and the Redlegs in Cincinnati. Unplayable weather conditions also wiped out a scheduled game between the Philadelphia Phillies and New York Giants at the Polo Grounds.

Kellner did not walk a batter as he faced only 28 Yankees. A double and triple by Gene Woodling spoiled his bid for a no-hitter.

A three-run outburst in the 11th, highlighted by Bobby Young's clutch single and daring base-running, gave the Browns their uphill win over Detroit.

Roy Campanella and Duke Snider drove in four runs apiece, Jackie Robinson reached base for the eighth straight time and rookie Junior Gilliam stole three bases as the Dodgers made it three straight over the hapless Pirates.

Browns and Alex Kellner Early Season Sensations

SPORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

Mickey Mantle's Homeric smash at Griffith Stadium—565 feet Red Patterson said—sent the sports historians scurrying to the archives. And aroused some musty memories in this guy's mind.

Mantle's incredible blast pressed the immortal Babe Ruth for distance honors, but we were thinking of three former greats of the local baseball scene.

James "Babe" Volker, Big Ted Freligh of Saugerties, and the late "Had" Bassett of Kingston, could probably hit a ball as far as any man who ever lived. That sounds like a large order but, if you ever had the pleasure of watching this trio of mastadons propel a horsehide, you know the statement isn't a silly exaggeration.

Volker was the Olympian of the trio. Better known as a pitcher with such hallowed names as the East Kingston Studebakers, the Knights of Columbus, Kingston Colonials and Kingston All Stars, he could, on occasion, drive a baseball for terrifying distance.

• There Was One at Saugerties

Big Jim hit two of the longest shots we ever saw outside the major leagues. Both must have traveled more than 500 feet toward space. One was a titanic blast at Saugerties on the old diamond and was last seen soaring over the road leading into the stadium in deepest left field. The other clout was a majestic effort that sailed out of the Millbrook baseball park and wound up somewhere in northern Dutchess county.

Freligh and Bassett could hit for distances beyond the range of ordinary mortals. We once saw Big Had rifle a shot over the railroad tracks at the old Pan Am field. On another occasion he powered a rocket at Flatbush that appeared to cover several acres of good farm soil below that Flatbush school. We remember that one, we pitched it to him.

The Mantles, the Ruths, Foxxes supermen all. But Messrs. Volker-Freligh-Bassett were no bushers in that department.

• Flotsam and Jetsam:

Sonnie Meyers, who tangles with Ronnie Etchison here tonight, drew a $2500 gate with Irish Pat O'Connor last week at Rome. Former Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman has been named honorary commodore of the Kingston Power Boat Association for 1953. With the designation goes the honorary chairmanship of this year's regatta on July 5. Jack Feye, the deep sea fishing expert, and Richard Meyer, two staunch supporters of the regatta since its inception, will assist Chairman Neil Bruck. Connie Mack has revised his all-time baseball team and now lists the following: First base, George Sisler; second base, Eddie Collins; third base, Harold "Pie" Traynor; shortstop, Hans Wagner. He still goes with the outfield of Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Babe Ruth. His pitchers are Walter Johnson and Christy Mathewson, with Mickey Cochrane and Bill Dickey as the catchers. Middletown, the least professional sports-minded town in the area, is doing a terrific job with junior baseball. A 9-team league has been organized for 1953 with the age limit set at 18 years. Each team is permitted five holdovers from the previous season.

KWBA holds its annual meeting on Monday, May 18, at the YWCA and, besides the election of officers, will ballot on a proposal to stage the annual association tournament the last week in November or the first in December. Using the previous year-end's averages. The women put on the feed bag on Saturday, June 6, at a place to be announced. The state women's association has requested all member city groups to appoint a junior bowling chairman for their own association. The purpose is to further the American Junior Bowling Congress, a youth sports movement that was established long before the Little League in baseball. Its founder, Milton Raymer, is secretary of the AJBC, and will address the state association meeting in May. The AJBC program should be set up in Kingston for the 1953-54 season as a joint responsibility of the KWBA and the KBA. There is also considerable merit to a movement to organize a Hudson Valley Bowling Council made up of member associations of men and women bowlers in the district.

Maybe Izaak Walton was right when he observed: "For angling may be said to be so like mathematics, that it can never be fully learned; at least not so fully but that there will still be more new experiments left for the trial of other men that succeed us."

Southpaw Blanks Yanks 2nd Time

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The 1953 major league baseball season is going to be full of surprises, if the first week is any criterion.

Just look what happened yesterday, the first Sunday of the campaign and only the seventh playing day:

1. Alex Kellner, who dropped six of seven decisions to the New York Yankees last year, shut out the world champions for the second time within six days. The tall Philadelphia Athletics' lefthander became the first pitcher in 19 years to blank the Yanks twice in a row, two-hitting them, 3-0, in the second game of yesterday's doubleheader. He turned them back, 5-0, on five hits, opening day.

2. Bobby Shantz, who didn't lose two in a row last year until early in September, dropped his second straight start when the Yanks defeated him, 5-2, in the first game. The little Philadelphia southpaw has blown two in a row to the champs this season. The Yankees beat him 4-1, last Wednesday.

Browns Sizzling

3. The St. Louis Browns, generally picked to finish deep in the second division, are leading the American League with five triumphs in six games. An 11-inning, 6-3 triumph over the Tigers yesterday gave the Browns a sweep of the three-game series in Detroit and extended their winning streak to four.

4. Walter Masterson, discarded by the Red Sox last summer, turned on his former mates with a five-hitter, fanning nine, as he pitched the Washington Senators to a 4-0 triumph over Boston.

5. Although they accumulated only nine hits off five Pittsburgh pitchers, the Brooklyn Dodgers were recipients of 14 bases on balls and stole four bases to overwhelm the Pirates, 12-4. The result boosted the Dodgers' first place lead in the National League to one full game over St. Louis and dropped the Pirates into the cellar with four defeats in five starts.

Dodgers Stroll

6. The Cardinals scored two runs on two Milwaukee double plays, enough to give them a 4-3 victory over the Braves in a game that was halted in the first inning because of a snow-flurry. A blinding snow, incidentally, halted the Dodger-Pirate game in Pittsburgh for 37 minutes.

Snow, rain and cold weather forced postponements of scheduled doubleheaders between Cleveland and the White Sox in Chicago, and Chicago and the Redlegs in Cincinnati. Unplayable weather conditions also wiped out a scheduled game between the Philadelphia Phillies and New York Giants at the Polo Grounds.

Kellner did not walk a batter as he faced only 28 Yankees. A double and triple by Gene Woodling spoiled his bid for a no-hitter.

A three-run outburst in the 11th, highlighted by Bobby Young's clutch single and daring base-running, gave the Browns their uphill win over Detroit.

Roy Campanella and Duke Snider drove in four runs apiece, Jackie Robinson reached base for the eighth straight time and rookie Junior Gilliam stole three bases as the Dodgers made it three straight over the hapless Pirates.

George Shufeldt was the top bowler of the weekend with a 629 smash in the Ferraro Mixed League. He posted solos of 215, 226 and 188.

Motorcyclist Is Injured

Jens Erick Sorensen, 20, of Route 1, Kingston, was seriously injured when the motorcycle he was riding ran off Route 32 about four miles north of Kingston and struck a parked automobile at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, state police reported.

Sorensen's injuries were listed tentatively on the state police report as a possible fractured skull and possible cerebral hemorrhages. He was taken by ambulance to Kingston Hospital, where his condition this morning was reported as "serious."

The cycle Sorensen was operating was owned by Harold Paul Ilgner of the same address, state police said. It struck and damaged the right rear side of an automobile owned by Alice Hessdorfer of the Neighborhood road, Lake Katrine, which was parked on a lawn along Route 32, according to Trooper H. S. Rhodes, who investigated.

Pakistan's Boss Sides With America

Karachi, Pakistan, April 20 (AP)—Pakistan's new prime minister, Mohammed Ali, in an interview today cast the lot of his three-day old regime behind the United States in world affairs.

"We just do not have much in common with the Soviet Union," he declared.

He stressed Pakistan's need for one million tons of American wheat to meet a food crisis.

The 44-year-old former ambassador to Washington, interviewed on his sick bed where he is suffering from dysentery, said Pakistan, "most certainly belongs to the free world, and whether in America you like it or not the mantle of leadership of the free world has fallen upon you.

"We value freedom as highly as you do."

to move his two car garage which was threatened by undermining. The concrete slab on which the garage formerly rested at present extends approximately six feet over the end of the creek bank.

Next door to Serota, Alexander Schoen operates a small machine shop. When he built the shop three years ago, Schoen said, the yard from the back of the shop to the edge of the creek bank measured 86 feet. Now it is down to 42 feet, and if the erosion continues at its present rate Schoen estimates he will have to move in two years.

Serota estimates he lost about 40 feet of ground from his back yard. Behind his garage, he had built, two years ago, a heavy concrete retaining wall, topped by a cyclone fence. The wall has been undermined and both wall and fence at present lay in ruins, a twisted mass of wire and concrete extending down into the creek.

Serota, a former Brooklyn resident, built his home and garage new in 1942. He and his wife, May, are concerned now lest the house itself be undermined.

The erosion has also affected Schoen in that he had planned the erection of an addition to his small machine shop. This expansion he has ruled out as unsound under the present conditions.

The properties are high on the creek bank, approximately 25 to 30 feet above water level, and were not actually flooded. But the changing stream bed set off a chain reaction of erosion, with the result that each heavy rain results in the breaking off of additional ground, which slides down into the creek.

Along the edge of the bank can be seen "half moons" of earth, splitting from the main property and starting to slide down the bank. The largest of these "half-moons" measures about six feet in width at its largest part.

The location is near the point at Mt. Tremper where the Little Beaverkill flows into the Esopus Creek.

Serota has made numerous inquiries as to what might be done toward alleviating the situation. The $50,000 flood control project approved by the Army Corps of Engineers largely as a result of conferences arranged by State Senator Arthur H. Wicks, applies to the larger problem of flooding along the Esopus itself and does not extend to its tributary, the Little Beaverkill.

In today's hand South bids one no-trump to show a hand of balanced distribution, stoppers in at least three suits, and a count of 16 to 18 points. North very properly raises to three no-trump with a balanced hand and a count of 10 points. It is clear to North that the combined count is at least 26 points and at most 28 points, which is enough for game but not enough for a slam.

When West opens the king of clubs, South must win with the ace in order to be sure that dummy's jack will provide a second stopper in the suit. South counts his tricks and discovers that he will be able to win three spades and two clubs and that he therefore needs four tricks in the red suits.

Since neither red suit can possibly provide more than three tricks, South realizes that he must tackle both suits. It is vital for South to begin with the hearts because this will give the opponents a better chance to make the mistakes that South needs.

South must therefore lead a spade to dummy's queen and return a low heart from dummy. If East is an average player, he will play a low heart in the hope that South will misguess a finesse or stub his toe in some other way. This allows South to "steal" a heart trick.

Having obtained one heart trick, South can now switch to diamonds and speedily develop three diamond tricks. East can take the ace of diamonds and lead anther club, but dummy's jack of clubs will take a trick and declarer can then win nine tricks with three spades, one heart, three diamonds and two clubs.

An expert and alert East would defeat the contract by playing the ace of hearts on the first round of the suit. East returns a low club, and West plays low likewise in order to force out dummy's jack. South must sooner or later tackle the diamonds in order to attempt to get his nine tricks. East promptly takes the ace of diamonds and leads his last club, whereupon West defeats the contract by taking three club tricks.

Motorcyclist Is Injured

Jens Erick Sorensen, 20, of Route 1, Kingston, was seriously injured when the motorcycle he was riding ran off Route 32 about four miles north of Kingston and struck a parked automobile at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, state police reported.

Sorensen's injuries were listed tentatively on the state police report as a possible fractured skull and possible cerebral hemorrhages. He was taken by ambulance to Kingston Hospital, where his condition this morning was reported as "serious."

The cycle Sorensen was operating was owned by Harold Paul Ilgner of the same address, state police said. It struck and damaged the right rear side of an automobile owned by Alice Hessdorfer of the Neighborhood road, Lake Katrine, which was parked on a lawn along Route 32, according to Trooper H. S. Rhodes, who investigated.

Pakistan's Boss Sides With America

Karachi, Pakistan, April 20 (AP)—Pakistan's new prime minister, Mohammed Ali, in an interview today cast the lot of his three-day old regime behind the United States in world affairs.

"We just do not have much in common with the Soviet Union," he declared.

He stressed Pakistan's need for one million tons of American wheat to meet a food crisis.

The 44-year-old former ambassador to Washington, interviewed on his sick bed where he is suffering from dysentery, said Pakistan, "most certainly belongs to the free world, and whether in America you like it or not the mantle of leadership of the free world has fallen upon you.

"We value freedom as highly as you do."

to move his two car garage which was threatened by undermining. The concrete slab on which the garage formerly rested at present extends approximately six feet over the end of the creek bank.

Next door to Serota, Alexander Schoen operates a small machine shop. When he built the shop three years ago, Schoen said, the yard from the back of the shop to the edge of the creek bank measured 86 feet. Now it is down to 42 feet, and if the erosion continues at its present rate Schoen estimates he will have to move in two years.

Serota estimates he lost about 40 feet of ground from his back yard. Behind his garage, he had built, two years ago, a heavy concrete retaining wall, topped by a cyclone fence. The wall has been undermined and both wall and fence at present lay in ruins, a twisted mass of wire and concrete extending down into the creek.

Serota, a former Brooklyn resident, built his home and garage new in 1942. He and his wife, May, are concerned now lest the house itself be undermined.

The erosion has also affected Schoen in that he had planned the erection of an addition to his small machine shop. This expansion he has ruled out as unsound under the present conditions.

The properties are high on the creek bank, approximately 25 to 30 feet above water level, and were not actually flooded. But the changing stream bed set off a chain reaction of erosion, with the result that each heavy rain results in the breaking off of additional ground, which slides down into the creek.

Along the edge of the bank can be seen "half moons" of earth, splitting from the main property and starting to slide down the bank. The largest of these "half-moons" measures about six feet in width at its largest part.

The location is near the point at Mt. Tremper where the Little Beaverkill flows into the Esopus Creek.

Serota has made numerous inquiries as to what might be done toward alleviating the situation. The $50,000 flood control project approved by the Army Corps of Engineers largely as a result of conferences arranged by State Senator Arthur H. Wicks, applies to the larger problem of flooding along the Esopus itself and does not extend to its tributary, the Little Beaverkill.

In today's hand South bids one no-trump to show a hand of balanced distribution, stoppers in at least three suits, and a count of 16 to 18 points. North very properly raises to three no-trump with a balanced hand and a count of 10 points. It is clear to North that the combined count is at least 26 points and at most 28 points, which is enough for game but not enough for a slam.

When West opens the king of clubs, South must win with the ace in order to be sure that dummy's jack will provide a second stopper in the suit. South counts his tricks and discovers that he will be able to win three spades and two clubs and that he therefore needs four tricks in the red suits.

Since neither red suit can possibly provide more than three tricks, South realizes that he must tackle both suits. It is vital for South to begin with the hearts because this will give the opponents a better chance to make the mistakes that South needs.

South must therefore lead a spade to dummy's queen and return a low heart from dummy. If East is an average player, he will play a low heart in the hope that South will misguess a finesse or stub his toe in some other way. This allows South to "steal" a heart trick.

Having obtained one heart trick, South can now switch to diamonds and speedily develop three diamond tricks. East can take the ace of diamonds and lead another club, but dummy's jack of clubs will take a trick and declarer can then win nine tricks with three spades, one heart, three diamonds and two clubs.

An expert and alert East would defeat the contract by playing the ace of hearts on the first round of the suit. East returns a low club, and West plays low likewise in order to force out dummy's jack. South must sooner or later tackle the diamonds in order to attempt to get his nine tricks. East promptly takes the ace of diamonds and leads his last club, whereupon West defeats the contract by taking three club tricks.

Time is Money!
The time you spend on your job is money in your pay envelope. Like time, this money has a way of "flying" fast - - - from one pay day to the next. You can't make time stand still. But you can make some of your money stand still - - - in a savings account. Not only stand still, but GROW steadily via the interest it earns for you. Timely advice: start a savings account at once. Then deposit a definite amount of money every pay day - - - before it gets a chance to fly!
